Weakened Storm Hits Miami With 90-Mi. Wind

Havana Battered Earlier in Day By 132-Mile Blow That Cost 7 Lives

Miami, Oct. 5 (U.P.).—A hurricane that took at least seven lives in Cuba and then moved swiftly through the Florida "Gold Coast" passed out to sea tonight 30 miles north of here.

In the wake of the late season storm was damage estimated at 10 million dollars, most of it in Havana, the Cuban capital, where the storm struck with 132-mile-an-hour winds before dawn.

Hurricane nags were lowered in Miami at 10:30 p. m. (EST) after the small but savage Caribbean storm had delivered a one-two punch against the city with 90-mile-an-hour winds.

It whirled up the coast from Miami to the tornado-stricken town of Pompano and shifted out to sea at 9:30 p. m.

The storm center was about 40 miles east of Palm Beach at 12:30 a. m. (EST), bowling along at 18 to 20 miles per hour.

The storm hit Havana at 4 a. m. It roared across the Florida straits into Key West, still littered with rubbish from a hurricane only two weeks ago, and turned its winds toward Miami.

Hurricane winds hit this winter resort capital at 6 p. m., subsided at 7:05 p. m., during the eerie calm that marks the center of the rotating storm, and struck again at the city 45 minutes later.

The second blow was the hardest with winds up to 90 miles an hour crashing in plate glass windowns on downtown Flagler st. and other sections of the city. A banana boat was driven into the Second ave. drawbridge.

Rain poured into Miami to a depth of 9.56 inches by 7:30 p. m., inundating large areas of low-lying Hialeah where more than 50 families were flooded out of their homes.

Lights flickered out in Miami early in the storm and in some sections water pressure failed. Four small stores burned out during the storm in Miami Beach.

Fifteen persons were treated by the Red Cross for storm injuries, most of them minor hurts.

A tornado that twisted out of the hurricane's fringe hit two communities north of Miami, demolishing seven houses in the coastal town of Pompano, and injuring seven persons, none of them seriously. It struck a few minutes later at Fort Lauderdale, where no injuries were reported, but one building was blown down.

Most of the damage so far reported was minor.

Belated Arrival Of 'New Look' in Russia Heralded

London, Oct. 5 (U.P.).—Radio Moscow announced today that the "new look" has finally reached Russia.

The Moscow broadcast said lowered hemlines dominated 1500 dresses displayed by Russian designers at a fashion show.

"A remarkable range of new creations from the fashion houses of many Soviet cities was displayed," Moscow reported. "Models ranging from exquisite evening and theater gowns to . . . working dresses, sports costumes and overcoats were shown."

The formal and semiformal gowns all had long skirts, but work and sports dresses stayed just below the knee, the broadcast said.

Gales and Rain Whip Area; Bay Tug Sinks, 7 Missing

Winds of gale force and rain like driving needles whipped Washington and a widespread area yesterday and last night.

The gale capsized a tug in Chesapeake Bay at the entrance to Baltimore Harbor and seven men were reported missing.

Locally, Miss Mary Barbieri, 34, of 4400 Jennifer st. nw., a drug store employe, was fatally injured when struck by a bus during the storm at Wisconsin ave. and Fessenden st. nw.

Early in the evening, an automatic power gadget clicked off and nearly half of Alexandria and Arlington was darkened for about 30 minutes.

The Weather Bureau station at National Airport reported a sustained wind velocity of 48 MPH and a high gust of 55 MPH. The Weather Bureau said because of the wind and rain, tides were running two to three feet above normal in the Potomac River. Floods were not feared, however.

In some sections of the city, tree branches were blown to the ground but general damage was slight.

Colonial Beach, Va., reported it had been buffeted by heavy winds but escaped with small damage to some of its boathouses.

Dr. Bush Quits As Military Research Head

President Compton Of M. I. T. Named As His Successor

Dr. Vannevar Bush, commander of America's research forces during World War II, resigned yesterday as chairman of the National Military Establishment Research and Development Board.

Accepting Dr. Bush's withdrawal "with regret," President Truman named Dr. Karl T. Compton, atomic physicist and president of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, in his place.

Served Through War

Bush, 58-year-old head of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, held down this major post and the top defense research assignment throughout the war.

In his letter of resignation, the veteran scientist said he would give his full attention to the affairs of the Carnegie Institution. He declared that he was stepping down because he felt it wise to have a "reasonable rotation" in the civilian membership of the research and development board "in order to bring in new points of view and to increase the contacts between the military and civilian scientists and engineers."

Like his predecessor, Dr. Compton has had broad experience both as a scientist and an administrator. He worked on submarine detection devices in World War I and in the second world conflict, served on scientific committees concerned with development of atomic warfare, radar, ordnance and synthetic rubber.

Held Many Posts

The 61-year-old physicist was a member of President Truman's atomic bomb tests committee and chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff evaluation board for the tests. He also headed the President's advisory commission on universal military training.

Dr. Bush came to Washington to head the Carnegie Institution in 1939, after serving as vice president and engineering dean of M.I.T. He was appointed chairman of the National Defense Research Commission in 1940 and became chairman of the Office of Scientific Research and Development in 1941.

In the latter post he mobilized the Nation's scientific brains for war. Out of OSRD's work came such developments as the proximity fuse, U-boat detection devices and new type radar.

War Work Praised

Defense Secretary James Forrestal yesterday praised Bush's wartime contributions.

"No one is more aware than I," said Forrestal, "of the extent to which you were responsible for equipping our wartime forces with the most modern and effective weapons and of the thousands of American lives which were saved as a result of your work."

Forrestal revealed that Bush had consented to remain with the Research and Development Board temporarily as deputy chairman to assist Compton in taking over the important post. Friends said Dr. Bush has not been in good health for some time.

Some scientists felt that the ap-

Moves to Defer Scientists Stir Policy Dispute

White House Invokes Security Board Aid In Confliet of Views

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

A major policy dispute is under way here over the drafting—or deferment—of student scientists under the Selective Service Act.

Conflicting recommendations have been received at the White House, and have been turned over to the National Security Resources Board to be reconciled.

This same issue was extensively debated during and after World War II, and the wartime decision to draft science students brought sharp protests that it seriously hampered the Nation's scientific development for many years to come.

No Decision Made

The Selective Service Act of 1948, for a 21-month draft of men between the ages of 19 and 25, made no policy decision on that score, however, beyond giving the President authority to prescribe deferment of categories of men required for the national interest, with actual deferment on an individual basis.

In the absence of a stated policy on student scientists, the now-familiar arguments are under way—behind closed doors—as to whether it is of more immediate importance to the national security to place all available young manpower in military uniform, or permit prospective nuclear-physicists, chemists, engineers, etc., to complete their schooling now.

Partial Plan Reported

Selective Service, whose officials emphasize that it is not a policy-making body, is reported to have recently submitted to the White House a proposed exemption plan for medical, dental, osteopathic and veterinarian students. These involve the science students of most direct need, in terms of immediacy, to maintain forces in combat.

Many scientists and educators fear that Selective Service thus will follow the policies of World War II, and with the predominant interest of turning troops into the field, pick off all varieties of young scientists.

Selective Service, however, has given no indication of its intent regarding a change of view.

Steady Supply Provided

The Interdepartmental Committee on Research and Development, headed by Alexander Wetmore, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, meanwhile has drawn up long-range plans for maintaining a steady supply of students in all branches of science, possibly 50,000 a year.

One of the proposals reported to have been made by the committee would permit science students to be deferred in reduced numbers over a period of years—screening out the less bright students along the way, to end up with the "cream" of the young scientists of the Nation. Eventually, however, even they would have to serve some form of military service.

Neither Selective Board nor Interdepartmental Committee officials will disclose any details of their plans. It is believed com-

Lewis Terms Truman Not Fit for Office

Hints Indorsement Of Dewey in Attack On 'Schemer' at Miners' Convention

Cincinnati, Oct. 5 (AP).—John L. Lewis opened the United Mine Workers Convention today with a personal attack on President Truman, but he withheld direct indorsement of Republican Candidate Thomas E. Dewey in the presidential campaign.

Lewis had indicated in advance he would criticize Mr. Truman, who used court injunctions to halt coal strikes in 1946 and 1948.

The 3000 delegates, some of them equipped with noise makers, cheered as Lewis berated the President. Four bands participated in a demonstration for the union leader, both before and after his speech.

Asks Something Be Done

"It devolves on you," he said to the delegates, "to do something about it when you have a chance to say who shall be the next President of the United States."

Of Mr. Truman, Lewis said:

"He is a man totally unfitted for the position. His principles are elastic. He is careless with the truth."

"He is a malignant, scheming sort of an individual who is dangerous not only to the United Mine Workers, but dangerous to the United States of America."

In Washington there was no immediate White House reaction. George M. Harrison, chairman of the Democratic National Committee's labor division and head of the American Federation of Labor's Truman-Barkley election committee, however, said Lewis' sentiments "don't represent the sentiments of the working people of this country."

No Comment From Dewey

Harrison made the statement as he left a White House conference of 25 AFL and independent union supporters of Mr. Truman.

Harrison said the "best evidence" of the true feeling of organized labor is the "magnitude of the representation here today."

There was no immediate comment from the Dewey headquarters.

Lewis said that Mr. Truman had dictated the prosecution of himself and the union in strikes of December, 1946, and last spring. He said the President had instructed Attorney General Tom Clark on how much of a fine to request the court to impose, and had insisted that Lewis not be jailed.

"I was hoping that if Harry Truman had to have his pound of flesh, he would have put me in jail, rather than take it from you, which is the thing a white man would have done rather than rob you," Lewis said to the delegates.

Fines for contempt of court totaling $2,100,000 against the union and $30,000 against Lewis were imposed by the Federal Court.

He said the President was "too

Rain Forecast For Series; Sain, Feller to Pitch

Boston, Oct. 5.—Both the Cleveland Indians and Boston Braves are eager and ready to begin baseball's richest World Series tomorrow but apparently the weatherman is not.

Rainy, windy and cool weather was the latest forecast by the Weather Bureau. Thursday's outlook is for clearing skies though continued cool.

After 12 long years as baseball's greatest pitcher, Cleveland's Bob Feller is scheduled to make his first series appearance in the opening game. Paradoxically, it comes at a time when he's had his worst year with the Indians, winning 19 and losing 15.

For the underdog Braves it will be Johnny Sain, who chalked up 24 victories against 15 defeats. For both clubs, the series is the end of a long famine—Cleveland last appeared in a series in 1920; Boston in 1914.

Starving Flier Found in Plane, Lost for 20 Days

Casper, Wyo., Oct. 5 (U.P.).—A half-starved flier was rescued today from the wreckage of a plane in which he was injured and his companion killed 20 days ago in isolated mountains 20 miles southeast of Casper.

James M. Alvey, 37, of Forsythe, Mont., was found near starvation and with a broken leg. The charred body of his companion, identified as Martin Mitzker, 35, also of Forsythe, lay in the burned wreckage of their plane.

Alvey was brought out of the wild mountain country by a ground rescue team. Attendants at Casper Hospital said his condition was fair despite his 20-day ordeal.

"I had a box of candy bars along and I guess they saved by life," Alvey told his rescuers. "I rationed myself to two a day and they held out for 12 days. There wasn't anything to eat the last week."

Soviet Boycotts Berlin Debate; U. N. Council Vote for Hearing Declared Illegal by Vishinsky

THEY WON'T DISCUSS IT—Hands upraised, Andrei Y. Vishinsky (right), the Russian Deputy Foreign Minister, and Dmitri Manuilsky, Foreign Minister of the Ukraine, vote against submission of the Berlin question to the U. N. Security Council for debate. Theirs were the only two negative votes yesterday against admission of the western powers' charges. Russia immediately announced she would take no part in discussion. (Photo radioed from Paris)

Paris, Oct. 5 (AP).—Andrei Vishinsky announced today Russia will boycott the Berlin debate in the United Nations Security Council.

He demanded the floor and disclosed his decision immediately after the Council voted 9 to 2 to hear full details of the East-West dispute over Berlin.

Vishinsky, the Soviet deputy foreign minister, left up in the air the question of whether he would be present when the Council resumes its meetings Wednesday.

Vishinsky and Dmitri Z. Manuilsky, foreign minister for the Soviet Ukraine voted alone against the other members of the Council in the decision to hear the Berlin debate. The United States, Britain, France, China, Syria, Argentina, Colombia, Belgium and Canada were in favor.

Then, in a short statement to the tense Council, Vishinsky summed up his arguments that the Council decision was illegal and the Berlin crisis should be handled by the four-power Council of Foreign Ministers.

In a calm voice and without gestures, he announced the decision to boycott:

"The delegation of the U. S. S. R. wishes to state, in the name of the government of the U. S. S. R., that the adoption by the majority of the Security Council of the present item for consideration constitutes a violation of Article 107 of the Charter, according to which such a question should be decided by the powers responsible for the occupation of Germany.

"This question should not have been handed to the Security Council. Accordingly, the Soviet delegation declares that it will not participate in the consideration of the Berlin question in the Security Council."

Then he sat back, adjusted the papers on his desk, and waited for the Council to go ahead. He did not walk out, and no member of his delegation made any motion to leave.

Manuilsky quickly backed Vishinsky and he, too, waited for the business to go on.

The Council quickly adjourned. It will meet twice Wednesday morning and afternoon, with Dr. Philip C. Jessup, the U. S. deputy, leading off with a 10,000-word

Vishinsky Addresses Slumbering Delegate

Paris, Oct. 5 (NYHT).—During the Security Council session on Berlin today, Andrei Vishinsky wished to reply to a point made in an earlier address by Faris el Khoury, delegate from Syria. El Khoury, however, turned out to be fast asleep in his chair.

"I wish the distinguished delegate of Syria the best of health, if he could hear me," said Vishinsky. "I beg his pardon for disturbing him."

Alexander Parodi of France nudged the Syrian delegate back to consciousness and the meeting proceeded.

Marshall Due Saturday to See Truman

Secretary Will Fly Here to Report on Developments Abroad

Secretary Marshall will fly home from Paris this weekend to confer with President Truman, the White House announced yesterday.

The announcement said "no particular crisis" was bringing the Secretary back, but that the President simply wanted a first-hand oral report from him on what had been going on in the United Nations.

The President canceled his campaign speeches scheduled for Saturday in up-State New York and Pennsylvania so that he could spend most of the day with his Secretary of State. The Presidential plane, the Independence, will leave for Paris today, and is scheduled to arrive with Marshall on Saturday morning.

U. S. Assurance Sought

Much more than the continuing Berlin crisis will be covered in talks between the Secretary and his chief. The Secretary will be able to tell the President, just as John Foster Dulles was able to tell Gov. Thomas E. Dewey in Albany yesterday, about the development of the "Western Union" alliance in western Europe, and the Europeans' insistent desire for new assurances of American support.

The French, in particular, have made no secret of the fact that they would welcome some reassuring statement by both presidential candidates and by congressional leaders as soon as possible.

Chairman Chan Gurney (R., S. Dak.) of the Senate Armed Services Committee tried to encourage them yesterday by saying he would ask the new Congress for a formal military alliance with the nations of western Europe.

Gurney, who has just returned from a month in Europe and the Middle East, told the United Press he had discussed his plan with Marshall in Paris. He said he would propose such an alliance together with legislation for a new lend-lease program to supply American armaments—"as much as we can send"—to Western Europe.

Pledge to Fight

The reporter asked whether this would be an American pledge to fight if Western Europe were attacked by Soviet Russia. "Obviously," was his answer. He described his proposal as "good insurance," and added that Marshall Plan expenditures for European economic recovery might be reduced to prevent military aid from straining the American economy.

The Senate went on record last May, in the Vandenberg resolution, in favor of American "association with" a European defense union. Since then American officers have attended military discussions in Western Europe which culminated only this week in the appointment

The Berlin Story

Concessions Won in Meeting With Stalin Upset by Molotov During Discussion of Details

(This is the third of five articles on the Berlin crisis, based in part on the secret diplomatic documents just published by the State Department.)

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.

STALIN was affable when he had his first meeting with the American, British and French envoys on the night of August 2.

He was chatty and good-humored and, from the Soviet viewpoint, he had every reason to be. By springing the trap of the Berlin blockade six weeks earlier, he had given the West what looked like a clear choice—either to quit Berlin or to sidetrack the plans for setting up a separate government in western Germany.

The West's position, however, was stronger than seemed possible when Marshal Sokolovsky, in Berlin, had cut off all land traffic in June on the pretext of "technical difficulties."

The great airlift was showing unsuspected capacity. American and British cargo carriers were flying almost 4000 tons a day into Berlin, and the totals were mounting steadily. The 2,500,000 people of the western sectors were being fed, although thousands were out of work because factories were shutting down for lack of fuel.

The new runway at Tempelhof was almost finished. Airmen and ground crews alike were getting invaluable training. The air commanders in Germany now felt sure they could keep Berlin fed through the bad flying weather of the fall and winter.

Even more encouraging to the West was the spirit of the Germans in the blockaded western sectors. Day after day they held crowded mass meetings a few blocks from the Soviet part of the city, cheering every mention of the airlift and pledging resistance with a courage they had not shown since the occupation began. The blockade of Berlin was making new enemies for communism in Berlin and throughout western Germany.

AMBASSADOR WALTER BEDELL SMITH was conscious of these assets when he went to the Kremlin on August 2. As senior member of the three envoys, he read a brief but pungent statement to Stalin on behalf of all three governments.

He repeated the "unquestionable and absolute" right of the Western Allies to be in Berlin. He said that "they do not intend to be coerced by any means whatsoever into abandoning this right."

He reminded Stalin of the "extreme seriousness" with which the blockade was viewed by the three governments.

If the trouble really was "technical," Smith said, it could be settled easily after the lifting of the blockade, but if Russia was trying to push the Western Allies from Berlin, the attempt would fail.

Stalin answered emphatically that it was not his purpose to push the Westerners from Berlin, although, he added, they no longer had a legal right to be there. They no longer had the right, he argued, because of the decision to set up a western German government at Frankfurt and to circulate the new Western currency in Berlin.

THE Soviet position was this: That you could not set up a new government at Frankfurt covering three of the four parts of Ger-

Smallest Proportionate Vote In 100 Years Seen Probable

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 5.—If the New York City voter registration completed last week is as good an indication of election interest this year as in past years, a smaller proportion of eligible voters will vote in the coming election than in any presidential election of the last 100 years.

The New York figures point to a turnout for the Nation of under 47 million—or only about 50 per cent of the potential voting population of the United States.

Even though there are now more than 94 million people 21 years of age or over, according to latest census estimates, the number who take the trouble to vote this year may actually fall below 1940 (49,900,000), and may not be much greater than 1936, despite a very large population increase since then. If a normal amount of interest were shown this year, approximately 58 million should vote.

Low turnouts are a factor unfavorable to the Democrats because a high percentage of the stay-at-homes are Democratic in their political leanings.

The Roosevelt landslides during the New Deal era were due in part to the interest aroused in the lower

Sentence to Be Appealed

Nisei Prison Guard Accused Of Brutality to Die as Traitor

(From Press Dispatches)

Los Angeles, Oct. 5.—Tomoya Kawakita, 28-year-old American-born interpreter in a wartime Japanese prison camp, was sentenced to death today for treason.

Federal Judge William C. Mathes sentenced Kawakita to die in the lethal gas chamber.

The judge refused to grant a motion for a new trial on pleas by Kawakita's attorney that the Japanese-American had been a victim of strange jury tactics.

Kawakita was convicted September 2. American prisoners of war in Japan testified he had treated them brutally while a guard at the Oeyama prison camp.

The judge, speaking before he pronounced sentence, said Kawakita's crime "is against the country of his birth and not against a few prisoners of war."

"Throughout history, treason always has been the most abhorred crime," said Judge Mathes. "A murderer violates a few, a traitor violates all. His life, if spared, would not be worth living."

Kawakita's attorney served notice of appeal.

(No person has ever been put to death for treason by the United States Government, according to Justice Department records. There have been between 35 and 40 treason trials with the death sentence frequently imposed, but none was ever carried out because of higher court reversals and clemency.)

Kawakita was spotted by a former GI in a Los Angeles department store after he returned to California following the war. Shortly after that he was traced and arrested.

Always Ready to Talk, Often Prepared, Vishinsky Is a Fountainhead of Irritating Red Epithets

Representatives of the Allied victor nations were gathered around the conference table to consider a treaty with defeated Romania. Vishinsky, the Russian delegate, had been droning on for hours, when New Zealand's spokesman suddenly hopped to his feet and cried out:

"All we hear is quack, quack, quack! When are we going to get down to business?"

Andrei Yanuarevitch Vishinsky must have been born with a silver phonograph-needle in his mouth. Whenever he gets up to speak, he repeats himself . . . repeats himself . . . repeats himself. . .

Russia's senior delegate to the United Nations—he stalked out of yesterday's Security Council meeting in high dudgeon—Vishinsky grinds out the Kremlin cant.

The official mouthpiece for Joe Stalin and the all-powerful Politburo is Foreign Minister Molotov; the official repeater is first Vice Foreign Minister Vishinsky.

But Vishinsky is no parrot. He can repeat himself in a thousand different variations of the same theme, suavely, or sarcastically, or shrilly like a shrew. And always he irritates . . . irritates . . irritates.

Vishinsky first attracted international attention in the 30's when as prosecutor in the mass purge trials of Trotskyites, he sent scores of old Bolshevik leaders before the firing squad. Since the "cold war" he has emerged in another role of prosecutor, accusing the United States and Western powers of bad faith, war-mongering, imperialism, and the rest of the warmed-over epithets. He is an ardent believer in that axiom for lawyers: When you have no case, abuse the other side.

For a high-ranking Red, Andrei Vishinsky has an uncommon background. He was born in Kiev of bourgeoise parents. He studied law and became active in the Menshevik wing of the Social Democratic Party. When came the Revolution in 1917, the Bolshevik faction took over and immediately started liquidating Czarists and Mensheviks alike.

Vishinsky managed to keep his head, spent a year in the Red Army, and was accepted in the ranks of the Bolshevik (Communist Party) in 1920.

An astute and able lawyer, Vishinsky became in due course the Soviet's legal-eagle, and pretty much the founding father of Russia present system of law.

A chunky man of 65, pink complexioned and white-haired, Vishinsky loves to orate and emote with gestures. He indulges in acting as a listener, too, now feigning sleep, now appearing intensely interested. He speaks a crisp Russian, a fluent French, and a poor English.

Like other Russian diplomats, Vishinsky doesn't warm up to foreigners. He has taken a shine, though, to British Foreign Minister Bevin, with whom he'll play a friendly game of darts in the evening after a most unfriendly exchange of barbs in the afternoon.

Vishinsky's mind is as sharp as the tip of a sickle when it comes to repartee. Chided by an Allied diplomat because the Soviet's stooge-government in Romania had appointed a notorious wartime Fascist to the cabinet, Vishinsky responded with a quote from the Bible about the Lord rejoicing more in the saving of one black sheep than of ninety-nine which did not go astray.

Averill Harriman, then Ambassador to Moscow, once asked Vishinsky how many votes could the pro-Russian government get in a really free election in Romania.

"In an absolutely fair election, about 45 per cent," Vishinsky replied. "But," he added, "with a little pressure, 90 per cent."

Stalin Deal Upset by Molotov

many and still share in the four-power control of all Germany from Berlin.

The Westerners assured Stalin that the proposed government of Frankfurt had never been intended as a central German government; and that to start setting it up now would in no way hamper a later agreement with the Russians covering the government of all of Germany.

The three envoys and Stalin agreed that it would be "desirable" to have a future four-power meeting to discuss the problems of Germany as a whole. The Westerners said, however, that they were not in a position to discuss what subjects should be taken up at such a meeting.

Toward the end of the two-hour interview, which Stalin made as friendly as he could, he asked whether the Westerners wanted to settle the Berlin matter then and there. If so, he said, he could agree to two things. The first was that the Soviet currency should replace all Western currency in Berlin, and simultaneously the blockade should be lifted.

The second—and perhaps the more significant—was that he would not insist upon postponement of the western German government as a condition of letting the trains reenter the city. He wanted the Western allies to know, however, of his "insistent desire" that the western German political decision be delayed.

The three envoys promised to refer Stalin's ideas back to their governments. They were moderately hopeful, and their reports of the talk with Stalin brought some hope to weary officials in Washington, London and Paris. Now the technical details had to be worked out with Molotov, who had been in the room during the meeting with his chief.

THE job assigned to the Western envoys was to write a formal agreement with Molotov which would lead to the lifting of the blockade. It turned out to be an exhausting and exasperating process. It required four long meetings with Molotov on August 6, 9, 12 and 16, one of them that lasted four hours; it also involved intricate day-and-night communication between Washington, London and Paris to keep the three governments in step on every point.

While Stalin had given genial assent to general principles, Molotov was stubborn and immovable when it came to details. More than that, Molotov seemed to the Westerners to go back on what his chief in the Kremlin had said.

For example, contrary to what Stalin had said on August 2, Molotov wanted to make the postponement of western German government a condition of lifting the blockade, and on August 9 tried to put his condition into a formal agreement.

As another example, Stalin talked of lifting "all transport restrictions"—namely, of lifting the blockade completely—as soon as the Soviet currency had been substituted for the Western currency in Berlin. But Molotov talked of lifting only those transport restrictions that had been imposed "after the announcement of currency reform in the western zones"—namely, after June 18.

This meant that the Russians might be willing to let the trains reenter Berlin, but would still insist on inspecting every passenger and every piece of freight, licensing every bargeload of goods, and continuing all the other hampering restrictions imposed on Western Allied traffic between March 30 and June 18.

There was also a legal point at issue, a point which the Westerners regarded as basic. They contended they were in Berlin by "established right" under wartime agreements; the blockade was illegal because it violated that right. To Molotov, however, the Westerners' right to stay in Berlin would have to rest entirely on whatever new agreement might be reached with the Kremlin.

As to currency, the Westerners tried to make Molotov understand that there must be real four-power control over the issuance and use of Soviet marks circulating throughout Berlin. To Molotov, however, all the money issued for circulation in Berlin would have to be controlled by the Sovietized central bank outside the city in the Soviet zone of Germany.

IF MOLOTOV'S attitude meant anything more than just bargaining and stalling, it meant that the Russians were bent on controlling the life of Berlin whether the Western occupation troops stayed there or not.

If the Russians could maintain the blockade measures imposed before June 18, they could watch and control all Western Allied traffic to and from the city. If their central bank in their zone could have sole control of all Berlin currency, they could disrupt the economic life of the western sectors.

If Molotov could make it seem that the Westerners were in Berlin by grace of a new agreement with him, rather than by established and equal right, the whole legal position of the West would be undermined. The Russians could always reimpose their blockade whenever they thought or pretended that the new agreement was being violated.

Finally, if Molotov could force the Western Allies to delay their plans for western Germany, he would win an enormous political and propaganda triumph. It would be a cheap price to pay for a partial lifting of the blockade.

The Western governments, gloomily pondering the record of these wasted weeks in Moscow, began thinking of next steps. In the State Department, the Foreign Office and the Quai d'Orsay, officials began restudying the Charter of the United Nations as a possible recourse in case all else failed. And they decided to ask for a second meeting with Stalin—to ask him some direct questions.

Red Relations Never Worse, Dulles Says

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 5 (AP).—Thomas E. Dewey's top adviser on foreign affairs told him today that United States Relations with Russia are more critical now than at any time since the war.

This view of the tense world situation was presented to the Republican presidential nominee by John Foster Dulles, A United States delegate to the United Nations General Assembly, it was learned tonight on excellent authority.

Dulles conferred with Dewey for 3½ hours this afternoon after flying from Paris, where he has been attending the U. N. Assembly sessions and participating in discussions of the Berlin blockade crisis.

The only public statement after the conference was one by Dewey saying that he and Dulles had discussed the "current international situation with particular reference to the grave problems created by the policies of Soviet Russia."

But a source thoroughly familiar with what took place at the conference gave details. The source would not be quoted by name.

Dulles, it was understood, told Dewey he felt that relations with Russia were considerably worse than they were four months ago, and that they were never worse at any time since the war than now.

Gov. Dewey Indorsed By Chicago Tribune

Chicago, Oct. 5 (AP).—The Chicago Tribune tonight announced its support of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, Republican candidate for President.

The Tribune, in an editorial entitled "Why We're for Dewey," said it favored Dewey "in part, of course, because of the character of his opponent. Mr. Truman is not the worst President this country has had; but he has the least capacity for the office.

"Finally, anad most important, we are for Governor Dewey because his election as standard bearer of the Republican Party will have a powerful effect on the re-election of a Republican House and Senate."

Huge Czech Uranium Loot Laid to Soviet

Paris, Oct. 5 (U.P.).—Russia is taking millions of dollars worth of uranium from Czechoslovakia every day, a committee of the United Nations General Assembly was informed today.

Dr. Jan Papanek, former Czech delegate to the U. N. who was ousted when the Communists took over the government, said the uranium is exported to Russia daily "without any accounting or payment by anyone."

Papanek made his statement to the Budget Committee, where he has served in a personal capacity since the Communists dismissed him as Czechoslovakia's permanent U. N. delegate.

Papanek's disclosure in the Budget Committee came after Canada and Australia disagreed in the Political Committee over how to cope with the East-West deadlock over the control of atomic energy.

Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton of Canada, a key figure in the U. N. Atomic Energy Commission, said there will be no world control of atomic energy unless such control is based on the majority-backed plan of the Western Powers.

Australia's Col. W. R. Hodgson, however, proposed a four-point program for dealing with the Russians.

"The consequences of slamming the door and of failure to reach agreement are too terrifying for mankind," Hodgson declared.

Colonel Hodgson insisted upon continuing the work of the U. N. Atomic Energy Commission with a view to:

1. Resolving the differences in principles.
2. Producing a plan for organizing, staffing and financing an international atomic agency.
3. Preparing a draft convention for using atomic energy for purely beneficial purposes.
4. Reporting back to the General Assembly "with the utmost expedition."

Failure to Get Isotopes Laid to France

By Stephen White

Paris, Oct. 5 (NYHT).—The failure of French scientists to get radioactive isotopes from the United States during the first year they were generally issued was the result of governmental bumbling on the part of France, rather than discrimination by the American Atomic Energy Commission.

After an extended period of hearing contradictory stories, this reporter is now convinced that France is to blame for the fact that of all the major western countries, France alone has not benefited by the distribution of isotopes.

This is in direct, and regrettable, contradiction to an earlier account, in which it was stated that the refusal arose from American distrust of Frederic Joliot-Curie, director of French atomic energy research, who is a Communist. It is true, however, that a good many European physicists are convinced that this is the real reason.

The truth appears to be that France was excessively slow in meeting ordinary conditions set up by the United States to simplify the transfer of isotopes. The organization has finally been perfected, however, and France is able to buy whatever is available.

There is little disposition, however, to deny that Joliot-Curie is a handicap to the course of French atomic energy research, since it makes it difficult or impossible for him to be welcomed on equal terms into the family of western scientists. On the other hand, to discharge him from his post—a matter which is already the subject of rumors—would be to discharge one of the world's greatest physicists, and would be equally damaging to France's progress.

Marshall to See President of Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery of Great Britain as head of a joint defense council for Britain, France and the Low Countries.

Administration and Republican leaders alike have long planned a request to the new Congress to give some kind of military guarantee to Western Europe, and to supply American armaments. The Western Europeans are now approaching the point in their own planning where they need further American assurance — subject, of course, to final congressional approval.

It would not be unprecedented if both the President and Governor Dewey came out in advance of election day in support of such an assurance. During the 1940 campaign President Roosevelt got Wendell L. Willkie's support in making his historic destroyers-for-bases deal with Great Britain thereby taking the issue out of the campaign.

With both Marshall and Dulles in the United States, Ambassador Warren R. Austin will become acting head of the American delegation to the United Nations Assembly. Austin has been handling the American case in the Assembly's debate on atomic energy, while Philip K. Jessup, his deputy, has been debating the Berlin blockade in the Security Council.

President Truman's change of plans will bring him directly back to Washington immediately after his campaign speech in Buffalo Friday night. White House Secretary Charles G. Ross said the President was sorry he had to cancel his proposed campaign stops after Buffalo, and did not know whether he could work them into a future campaign trip.

statement on the entire Berlin crisis.

The United States, France and Britain decided September 26 that it was useless to continue further talks with Russia in their attempt to break the Soviet blockade of Berlin.

They decided to present the case to the Security Council on the grounds the blockade was a threat to world peace.

Informed sources said Vishinsky's boycott would constitute an abstention. They said the Council has acted before after Russia abstained on an issue and they expected it could do so again.

A British spokesman offered a "private hunch." He said Russia would have somebody at the meeting other than Vishinsky, and when the question comes to a vote, the Russian will raise his hand in veto.

Soviet Zone Police Arm for 'Civil War'

Churchill Says

Asia's New Frontier Is on Elbe

London, Oct. 5 (AP). — Winston Churchill declared today "the frontier of Asia is upon the Elbe."

(A short part of the Elbe River borders the Russian and British zones of Germany. Russia has more area in Asia than in Europe.)

Churchill, the wartime Prime Minister, was appealing for reserve recruits for the Royal Air Force. He said Britain would be "very foolish to repeat again the mistakes of the past and be drawn, under even worse and far less excusable circumstances, into a life and death struggle for the mere existence of our country."

"It is not as if the existence of our country alone were at stake," he said in a speech to 3000 persons, "because the cause of freedom and resistance to tyranny in all its forms, whatever livery it wears or slogans it mouths, is a world cause and the duty which every man and woman owes to the human race."

A young woman pushed into the crowd while he spoke to distribute Communist pamphlets. Two men took the pamphlets from her and she slipped away without interrupting the speech.

By Marguerite Higgins

Berlin, Oct. 5 (NYHT).—The police of the Soviet occupation zone has virtually completed its reorganization into a heavily armed militia that, according to a Communist announcement today, is being trained as a fighting unit to defend the zone against "alarming civil war preparations being made in the west zone of Germany."

Thus a new and potentially dangerous semimilitary formation is being organized in the Soviet occupation zone even as the Soviet representative, Andrei Vishinsky, argues at the United Nations for a withdrawal of all occupation troops in Germany.

The target strength for the reorganized Soviet zone police was estimated by the official British newspaper here at 400,000.

The first official Communist confirmation that police are receiving semimilitary training came from Dr. Kurt Fischer, head of the Soviet zone department of interior. He justified the police training as necessary to defend the Soviet zone against "aggressive Fascist activities," which he said were inspired by agents of Anglo-American imperialists.

Writing in the official Communist newspaper, Die Neues Deutschland, Fischer revealed at the same time how widespread sabotage and unrest are in the Soviet zone.

According to Fischer, the "people's police" are being reorganized to combat such events as the following, which have happened in the last three months: incendiary attempts in nationalized plants; destruction of part of the Soviet zone crop by people who have been trained in western zone prisoner of war camps especially for this purpose; bomb attacks on Communist Party headquarters in the zone, and deliberate wastage of raw materials.

But the most remarkable part of Fischer's defense of the need for establishing semimilitary troops was his assertions that "the British army has taken over whole units of the German Wehrmacht" and his claim that Lieut. Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American military governor, "is organizing the industrial police in the American zone into fighting troops for a civil war."

The Russian air maneuvers produced three major infringements of the air corridors to Berlin today and drew four separate protests.

Russian parachutists practiced in the middle corridor. Later four Russian fighters zoomed and shot at a towing target in the northern corridor, and two Yaks buzzed a British York at less than 100 feet.

The Russians notified the British at 8:20 a.m. today that parachute practice in the corridor would start at 8:10 a.m. and continue through the morning.

Russians Are Reported Flying Superfort Copies

Berlin, Oct. 5 (AP).—Soviet copies of the American Superfortress were reported in Germany for the first time today.

Lieut. Martin Von Rosenberg of New York, a former B-29 pilot, said he recognized Soviet versions of the giant four-engined plane flying high over Berlin's western air corridor. The planes were in formation with attack bombers that looked like American A-20s and presumably were participating in air maneuvers.

'Don't Look at Photographers, Look at Me'

RED FEATHER KIDS AT WHITE HOUSE—When Dolores Silverthorne (left), 11, and Jimmy Peyton, 10, posed yesterday with President Truman after presenting him a "Red Feather Oscar," they took his advice and didn't look at the camera. Afterward, the two sixth-graders from Chicago said Mr. Truman told them: "Don't look at those photographers, look at me. I'm better looking." The two, who represent the millions of children benefiting from the Community Chests, said they thought the President was a "very nice man"

By Adrienne Tassler
Post Reporter

A little girl of 11, with smiling blue eyes, and an impish boy of 10, went calling on the President yesterday—to bring him a Red Feather "Oscar" and to thank him for being a campaign "volunteer."

Even though they wore bold Robin Hood costumes and recited a very formal piece on the importance of the Community Chest appeal, Mr. Truman it seems was not awed. In fact, the pair revealed later in a burst of conversation, he lifted them onto his big desk, put his arms around them and chatted away.

Joked With Them

Why, related Jimmy Peyton, 10, a brown-eyed Chicago Boy Scout and half of "The Red Feather Kids" team, the President even joked with them. When the photographers flooded into the big study and started clicking their cameras, the President told Jimmy and his Chest counterpart, Dolores Silverthorne:

"Don't look at those photographers. Look at me. I'm better looking."

That, anyhow, is how Jimmy tells it.

Dolores, who has brownish hair and a winning personality, was fairly gushing when she left the President's office. "Oh," she said, "it was a lot of fun. He was such a nice man."

Jimmy, as befits a member of the stauder sex, offered a more reserved comment. "I think he's a nice man," he observed. "He didn't say much—he was just talking about the statue and admiring it."

Later, Jimmy and Dolores, still wearing their bright red pointed shoes, Red Feather tunics and jaunty skull caps, went over to Hotel Washington to attend a luncheon of the special gifts unit of the Community Chest Federation here. They ate chicken pie and ice cream, spoke unhesitatingly about their White House visit and then departed in a taxi for a tour of the city.

Everyone agreed that they were model guests of honor. The youngsters were accompanied by Mrs. Herbert E. Silverthorne, Dolores' mother and leader of the Girl Scout troop to which Dolores belongs, and Peter J. Peyton, Jimmy's dad.

Albert P. Weisman, who is with the Community Chest of Chicago, where the visitors live, said the youngsters had only one worry—preparation of a "speech" to be delivered today to their respective grade school classes. It's an assignment from their teachers.

At the luncheon, after the little boy and girl left, it was revealed that volunteers have received 426 new pledges in the special gifts unit—for a total of 1508, or more than 10 per cent of this year's goal. E. Cortland Parker, chairman, said he was "optimistic."

Today, Madame Henri Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador, will address a luncheon rally of residential workers and women's clubs representatives, 12:30 p. m. at Hotel Washington. The over-all 1949 goal is $4,566,790.

Man Dies When Locked In 420-Degree Oven

Elizabeth, N. J., Oct. 5 (AP).—A 22-year-old Singer Manufacturing Co. worker died last night when accidentally locked in a 420-degree drying oven for five hours.

Police said plant officials told them the man, John T. Kosloski, a Navy veteran, had been cleaning and repairing the interiors of several of the ovens yesterday.

Five-Nation Alliance Lists War Needs

London, Oct. 5 (AP).—Western Europe's five-nation alliance went to work today on a list of what it will need—presumably from the United States—to build an effective military barrier against communism.

Chiefs of staff from Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg met here to talk over their problems and coordinate plans for joint action in event of attack.

The meeting came less than 24 hours after the announcement that the alliance had picked Field Marshal Lord Montgomery, Britain's best-known soldier, to mastermind the job of common defense planning.

Details of the discussions were secret. Much of the spadework has been done by a special committee which has met regularly for the past two months with American and Canadian military observers present.

Western diplomats said privately the timetable for seeking American aid in the way of military material may have been advanced as a result of East-West tension over Berlin.

They cited as evidence the action of the alliance's Defense Ministers in announcing Montgomery's appointment, along with land, sea and air aides, much earlier than originally anticipated.

Montgomery is expected to resign within the next two days as chief of Britain's imperial general staff. Gen. Sir John Crocker, 52, commander in chief of the Middle East, may get the job.

Czechs to Ban All But Reds

Prague, Oct. 5 (U.P.).—Czechoslovakia's Communist-dominated Parliament will take up Wednesday a sweeping "law for the defense of the people's democratic republic" which will make almost any form of political opposition a criminal offense.

It is expected the law will be enacted by a unanimous vote before adjournment Wednesday and a purge, already under way, may be intensified.

A chief provision of the law is the institution of a new state court with streamlined procedure and with extraordinary powers to hold secret sessions in important cases.

A wide crackdown against "reactionaries" has been proceeding for two weeks already, more than 100 persons have been sentenced and it is reported that hundreds more are under arrest.

Cripps Sees Austerity Till '52

New York, Oct. 5 (NYHT).—Sir Stafford Cripps, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, said today he expects a slight improvement in the British standard of living about 1952, provided there is no great expansion of the present rearmament program.

Sir Stafford, who outlined Britain's economic position at a press conference, plans to leave by air for Britain Thursday. He left Washington Monday after taking part in the third annual meeting of the World Bank and International Monetary Fund.

Britain's standard of living is now slightly lower than it was during the war and in the first year after the war, he said.

"A gradual progressive improvement is taking place, but there will be no real improvement until 1952," he added.

In that year, when the present European Recovery Program is scheduled to end, Britain's objective is to "achieve a balance of trade without any extraordinary external assistance, and bring about some slight improvement in the standard of living." Sir Stafford cautiously said he foresaw the possibility of achieving this objective.

Truman Sets Oct. 27 As National Navy Day

Czech Pilot Is Forced To Fly 14 to U. S. Zone

Munich, Germany, Oct. 5 (U.P.).—A passenger aboard a Czechoslovak airliner yesterday held a gun on the pilot and made him fly his 14 passengers to the United States zone of Germany, it was reported today.

Twelve of the passengers chose to remain here. The pilot and two passengers—Mrs. William Siroky, wife of a Czechoslovak vice premier, and her 5-year-old son—plan to return to their Communist-dominated homeland.

The twin-engined plane was on a routine flight from Bratislava, capital of Slovakia, to Prague.

Union Demonstrations Spread Over France As Civil Workers Strike Over Queuille Offer

Paris, Oct. 5 (NYHT).—Trade union demonstrations against the French government's economic program, which already have closed the coal mines, assumed nation-wide scope today when civil service workers staged walkouts ranging from 1 to 24 hours against Premier Henri Queuille's offer of a 15 per cent wage increase.

Sponsored by the Communist-led General Confederation of Labor and the Christian Workers Confederation, the government employe strikes stopped all but through passenger trains in Lorraine, reduced water and illuminating gas pressure in Paris, closed down some of the capital's borough halls and left garbage uncollected on city and suburban streets.

The government announced an accord had been reached with the employes of the government-operated electric light and gas plants.

The public utility workers had been threatening to strike over personnal discharges for economy. The government did not announce terms of the settlement, but it seemed probable that the government had made concessions and might be prepared to meet the miners' terms.

The 325,000 coal miners strucg against the government's decision to dismiss 10 per cent of the employes in the nationalized coal industry.

Argentine Orders Arrest Of Griffith

Buenos Aires, Oct. 5 (U.P.).—An order for the arrest of John F. Griffith, former United States diplomatic official here, was issued today by Federal Judge Oscar Palma Beltran in connection with an alleged plot to assassinate President Juan D. Peron and his wife Eva.

Griffith, former cultural attache to the United States Embassy, now lives in Montevideo, Uruguay, across the River Plate.

Judge Palma, in closing the preliminary investigation into the alleged plot, ordered 14 persons held for trial.

Palma indicated Griffith's extradition would not be sought, but that if he entered Argentina he would be arrested.

Palma said all those ordered held for trial had confessed participation.

Griffith's alleged part was not clear from the judge's statement, but apparently he was accused of being friendly with the alleged plotters and of criticizing Peron's policies.

Greek Rebels Shell Key City

Athens, Oct. 5 (U.P.).—Guerilla artillery pounded the key rail and road junction of Florida in northern Greece last night, killing two soldiers and five women and wounding six civilians and eight soldiers, it was announced today.

The rebels lobbed about 60 shells into the town of 15,000 population, damaging a military hospital and knocking out electric power lines.

At the same time, raiding parties in the south Greek Peloponnesus attacked the town of Amalias with mortars, causing no known casualties, and pounded the rail station at Pyrgos with antitank shells, wounding two soldiers.

Florida, on the east flank of the guerilla stronghold in the Vitsi Mountains, is the most important communications center in the area fronting on the Yugoslav border.

Meanwhile, government firing squads continued the mass executions of captured Communists. Four men and four women were shot at Drama, seven at Serres and six at Mesolongion.

State Dept. Cool on Franco

The State Department yesterday reaffirmed its cold shoulder policy toward Generalissimo Francisco Franco of Spain despite a call by Senator Gurney (R., S. Dak.) for renewed friendly relations.

Press Officer Michael J. McDermott said there is "no change in our position" when asked about Gurney's visit to Spain last week. Gurney, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, was accompanied by Army, Navy and Air Force officers.

After an hour's private talk with Franco, Gurney said he favored "complete re-establishment of all relations" between Spain and the United States.

Peru Quells New Disorders

Lima, Peru, Oct. 5 (AP).—Disorders flared anew in two widely separated sections of Peru today but loyal government forces quickly restored order.

The new outbreaks were in Arequipa, near the southern tip of the country, and near Paramonga, about 110 miles north of Lima. In both instances, armed civilian bands attempted to storm Army barracks without success.

Today's clashes came as President Joe Luis Bustamante Rivero cracked down on the APRA Party which he blamed for the attempted revolution which started in Callao, Lima's seaport, Sunday. The President declared the party illegal.

Order was completely restored in Callao after loyal troops forced the surrender of rebellious naval leaders.

Several Aprista labor leaders were arrested, among them Arturo Sabroso, secretary general of the Peruvian Labor Federation.

Almost 1100 Apristas were rounded up in the wake of the revolt.

The decree charged the party with preparing and directing the revolutionary attempt and destroying "elements of the national defense."

It was charged with organizing in regimented cells, maintaining "storm brigades" and using violence.

Despite Apra's program for social reform, including division of large landed estates, it has opposed the Communists. Communists and Apristas have engaged in street fights here in recent years.

Apra has much of its support among Indians.

Truman Urged To Act in Strike

Sacramento, Calif., Oct. 5 (AP).—President Truman was urged today, as a last resort, to take over the West Coast's strikebound ports for the Government.

The master of the California State Grange telegraphed the President urging, first, appointment of a five-member commission to help settle the strike—then to have the Government take over if the commission fails.

"We are not trying to determine which side is at fault," Master George Sehlmeyer said in the telegram. "But unless immediate action is taken great losses may result to California farmers."

Figures Differ 3 Cents

Sehlmeyer said "information so far available indicates that a difference of only 3 cents per hour in demands of the union and offers by the shipping firms stand in the way of settlement of the strike."

Cyrus S. Ching, national director of the Conciliation Service, told newsmen at San Francisco that the Federal agency has no plans for bringing the disputants together.

"At the present time I don't see any possible method of bringing the opposing sides together," Ching said. "There is no magic formula for handling things by mediation."

He added, however, his agency would do all it could to help solve the dispute if neither side called upon it.

The strike began when negotiations failed in contract disputes over the hiring hall and wages. CIO longshoremen demanded continued control of the hiring hall and a 15-cent boost to a base wage of $1.82 an hour.

After the strike began employers announced they would refuse to deal further with unions whose leaders have not signed non-Communist affidavits. Four seafaring unions walked out with the longshoremen.

operations at the two electrical equipment and refrigeration factories, which employ about 1200 persons.

A group of distributors and dealers arrived for an inspection tour. The pickets formed their lines outside the buses which brought them and they went into the plants without incident.

The strike started Monday night when the management reached a stalemate with representatives of the CIO United Auto Workers Union on a wage increase and other conditions for a new contract.

The workers asked a 13-cent wage increase and the company offered 7 cents an hour before the negotiations broke down.

Michigan's Labor Law Held Valid by Court

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 5 (AP).—Michigan's new labor law, once in doubt as to validity, remains on the books.

The State Supreme Court, clarifying a previous ruling, handed down a verdict yesterday leaving the law virtually intact.

In an original ruling the court held unconstitutional a clause which placed circuit county judges on compulsory arbitration panels in certain labor disputes.

Otherwise the law, known as the Tripp-Bonine Act, stands as written with regulations governing mass picketing and requiring a State-conducted strike vote before a strike can be legal.

Organized labor has fought the law, sometimes referred to as Michigan's "Little Taft-Hartley."

Pickets' Battle Brings Action by Riot Squads

Richmond, Calif., Oct. 5 (U.P.).—Police riot squads arrested four CIO oil workers in a picket-line battle outside the Standard Oil refinery here today and balked another riot in the month-old California oil strike.

Officers reported they went into a crowd of more than 100 stone-throwing strikers and seized the leaders in a brief struggle.

The strikers, setting up mass picket lines in an effort to prevent non-striking office workers from entering the refinery, were dispersed after the four leaders were shoved into patrol cars and jailed.

Victor Plants Remain Closed by Strike

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 5 (AP).—Victor Products Corp.'s two Hagerstown plants remained closed today by a strike of some 800 workers.

Pickets marched in the rain, but no attempt was made to resume

3 Rail Unions Refer Demands to Chairmen

Chicago, Oct. 5 (AP).—Three railroad unions decided today to refer their wage demands to their chairmen after two other rail unions settled their third round wage demands.

The three unions are the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen and the Switchmen's Union of North America. Their action followed acceptance of a 10-cent-an-hour wage increase by the Order of Railway Conductors and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen yesterday.

The engineers and firemen have asked an increase of $1.76 a day. This sum represents the difference between the 1.24 they received in 1946 and the $3 a day they had demanded. The workers are paid varying rates.

Wire Tapping Needless With Lewis, Clark Says

Attorney General Tom Clark yesterday denied that the Justice Department ever tapped any telephone wires of John L. Lewis.

Clark issued this statement:

"The department never tapped any of old John's wires or his headquarters.

"He talked so loud and bellowed so much it was not necessary.

"He is just angry because he couldn't get away with his defiance of the laws of this country. John L. cost the miners more than $2,000,000 in fines by this defiance and the noise he is making is a weak attempt to excuse himself."

Glazier's Strike Parley Fails

Negotiators for management and the AFL Glaziers Union, Local 963, conferred yesterday for several hours but failed to break a wage deadlock which might have ended the strike of 150 union members.

The workers have been on strike since last Friday. The 13 contractors affected by the walkout have offered 5 cents an hour less than the union's demands.

The wage issue will be considered by the union membership at a meeting tonight.

Truman Off Today On Eastern Swing

President Truman leaves this morning (8:45 a. m. EST) on another campaign swing which will take him into Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey and Delaware.

His main speeches will be at Philadelphia tonight, Jersey City Thursday night and Buffalo Friday evening. In addition he will deliver a couple of dozen talks along the way.

His first rear-platform talk will be made at Wilmington, Del., this morning. He plans to spend the rest of the day in Philadelphia and Camden, N. J. The topic of his Philadelphia speech will be atomic energy. He will speak in Convention Hall, where he was nominated for the Presidency in July.

Rear-Platform Talks

Thursday he will make brief talks from his train or in town squares at Bridgport, Reading, Allentown, Bethlehem, and Easton, Pa.

Arriving at Elizabeth, N. J., at 5 p. m. Thursday, he will drive to Newark and Jersey City.

On Friday he will talk at Schenectady, Amsterdam, Little Falls, Utica, Rome, Oneida, Syracuse, Auburn, Seneca Falls, Geneva, Rochester, and Batavia, N. Y., prior to an 8 p. m. speech at Buffalo.

On Sat rday, the President was to have spoken at Corning, Elmira and Binghampton, N. Y., and Scranton, Wilkes-Barre and Mauch Chunk, Pa., but late yesterday canceled the Saturday program to return to Washington from Buffalo for a conference with Secretary of State Marshall. Marshall has been summoned home from Paris for the conference.

Harrison to Join Party

One new face in the Truman party on this trip will be George M. Harrison, president of the AFL Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, head of Labor's Committee for Truman and Barkley, and head of the labor division of the Democratic National Committee.

Harrison called at the White House yesterday with the chiefs of 25 other AFL and independent unions, and congratulated Mr. Truman on his campaign to date.

Others in the party will be Secretaries Matthew J. Connelly and Charles G. Ross, Special Counsel Clark Clifford, and Brig. Gen Wallace Graham, the President's physician.

Representing the Democratic National Committee will be Mrs. Charles W. Tillett and Miss Catherine Salvey.

The presidential train has been made up by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. There will be more than 80 representatives of the press, radio, and newsreels.

Blinded Cleric Will Aid Youth

The loss of an eye is a small price if it saves a boy's soul, Rev. James Land Ellis declared yesterday in Municipal Court.

The 55-year-old Episcopal clergyman was in court where George Junior Holt, 21, was held for the District grand jury on a charge of mayhem. According to police, in a fit of rage Holt blinded the right eye of Mr. Ellis, who had befriended him for four years.

"If I can save the boy's soul through the loss of an eye, that's a good bargain, "said Mr. Ellis. "I still intend to do all I can to help the boy—not to hurt him."

Holt had been placed in the clergyman's custody by juvenile authorities. Last month, he moved out. He went back to Mr. Ellis' home at 247 Delaware ave. sw. Holt took his .22 caliber rifle, police said. Mr. Ellis pleaded with the youth, warning him that it was dangerous to carry a weapon on the street at night.

An argument ensued and then Holt hit the clergyman in the face with the rifle, police said. The breech cut the minister's eye, necessitating its removal.

Holt waived preliminary hearing and was sent to jail when he failed to make $3000 bond. According to Holt's attorney, Harry S. Peikin, Mr. Ellis has offered to send clothing to the defendant.

The clergyman has no church assignment. He teaches letter-writing at the Bureau of Ships.

Kirkland Will Speak in Va.

James R. Kirkland, Washington lawyer and counsel for the Senate District Committee, will speak at three Republican campaign rallies in Virginia's Eighth Congressional District during the coming week.

Kirkland

The meetings will be at King George County Courthouse Thursday; at Stafford County Courthouse Friday, and at Orange, Tuesday, October 12. Kirkland said all the meetings are set for 7:30 p. m.

Kirkland, assigned to the meetings by the Republican National Committee, said he will focus his talks on foreign policy.

He said he feels that foreign policy is the primary issue of the campaign. He said the Republican Party has shown a consistent, bipartisan cooperative attitude in foreign policy. He said the Republican policy calls for dealing firmly with the Soviet Union, and for insisting that Communists be removed from high offices in the Federal Government.

In contrast, he said the Democratic Party, by lack of leadership, has failed in its handling of foreign policy to the danger of America's security.

Johnson Gets Court O. K. in Texas Vote Fight

The Supreme Court in effect cleared the way yesterday for the name of Lyndon B. Johnson to appear on the Texas election ballot as the Democratic candidate for the United States Senate.

Johnson topped former Governor Coke Stevenson by 87 votes in the August 28 runoff primary in which almost 1,000,000 votes were cast.

He was later certified by the State Democratic Convention as the party's candidate.

However, Stevenson charged ballot frauds in three south Texas counties and won a Federal District Court injunction that would have kept Johnson's name off the ballot in November.

Stevenson also asked the Senate Subcommittee on Elections to investigate.

Supreme Court Justice Black, after hearing both Johnson's and Stevenson's lawyers argue their cases, on September 28 ordered the Federal court injunction lifted.

At the same time, he warned Federal judges to steer clear of umpiring election results.

Stevenson's lawyers then asked the Supreme Court to throw out Justice Black's orders. But yesterday the high court upheld Black by denying Stevenson's request.

The action was taken during a conference attended by all justices except Justice Murphy, who is undergoing medical treatment in Michigan.

The high court turned Johnson down on two other matters yesterday:

1. It denied a motion asking the full court to issue an order similar to that by Justice Black September 28.

2. It denied a request that the full court stay all proceedings in the Johnson case taken by United States District Court Judge T. Whitfield Davidson in Texas, who has ordered an investigation of voting in several counties.

Warren Calls for 'Traffic' Enforcement To Bar 'Road Hogs' of Industrial Monopoly

Charleston, W. Va., Oct. 5 (AP).—Gov. Earl Warren, calling for equal business opportunity for all, said here tonight that economic traffic enforcement is necessary to keep the "road hogs" of monopoly off America's industrial highway.

"The little jeeps of small business should have a chance to keep moving, just as well as the 10-ton truck of big business," he asserted.

The Republican vice presidential candidiate came into the coal mining Kanawha Valley after a day of campaigning across West Virginia, where he appealed to voters to back up the Dewey-Warren ticket with a GOP Congress.

Warren gave no hint of the coolness existing between Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and West Virginia's Republican Senator Chapman Revercomb over differences springing from Revercomb's stand on the displaced persons bill.

Although the Republican standard bearer was standing coolly aloof from Revercomb's bitter battle to hold his seat, the No. 2 candidate carefully called for the reelection of "a Republican Senator" from West Virginia.

In his speech prepared for a Republican rally at Municipal Auditorium tonight, Warren distinguished between size alone in industry and what he termed monopolistic trusts and cartels.

"Big industries with their mass production and low costs have contributed enormously through the years to the raising of American living standards," he said. "But we have got to keep it that way.

"We have got to be on the watch for the appearance of the economic road hog.

"I am thinking of trusts—they call them cartels in Europe—that override and destroy competition, limit production to suit themselves, and fix prices, not in the public interest but in their own interest—or that limit industrial activity to one section of a nation . . . preventing industrial development elsewhere."

In West Virginia's hot senatorial contest, Senator Revercomb is opposed by former Senator Matthew M. Neely—whom Revercomb defeated six years ago.

With State Democratic registrations far outstripping GOP voters, the United Mine Workers have also announced that West Virginia's 120,000 coal miners will take time off election day to attend union meetings—and presumably to get out the vote.

In the last special session of Congress, Revercomb and Dewey clashed over differences of opinion on the displaced persons bill. Dewey at that time was openly critical of Revercomb's attitude, but the West Virginian told reporters today he had "no reason to belive Governor Dewey is mad at me."

Camels are SO MILD that a 30-Day test revealed
NO THROAT IRRITATION
due to smoking Camels!

● Yes, in this test, hundreds of men and women all across the country smoked Camels—and only Camels—an average of one to two packages a day—for 30 consecutive days. Each week their throats were examined by noted throat specialists—a total of 2470 examinations—and these doctors found not one single case of throat irritation due to smoking Camels.

Police Trials

Although it represents a distinct improvement over the present procedure, the new police trial board system worked out by District police and the corporation counsel's office stops short of what it should be. Under the new procedure, as under the old, policemen will still be trying policemen. This is perfectly proper on cases of internal discipline, but on major infractions involving private citizens as complainants it is open to abuse. With two officers of the department serving on a three-man trial board, the suspicion of favoritism and whitewash will dog the board, however scrupulous its efforts at fairness.

The principal flaw that has been eliminated in the new system is the dual function of the corporation counsel's office. The present trial board consists of two policemen above the rank of captain and an assistant corporation counsel. The corporation counsel's office is also charged with prosecuting cases before the trial board. Thus in a sense it performs the function of both prosecutor and judge.

The revised procedure to go into effect November 19 provides for two separate trial boards. One, composed of three policemen above the rank of captain, will function much as a military court-martial and will hear cases initiated by members of the department involving police discipline. The second will be made up of two high-ranking members of the Police Department and a lay member of the District bar drawn from panels supplied by the two bar associations. This board will try cases in which civilians are the complainants. A third body, consisting of three civilians selected by the Commissioners, will operate somewhat as a grand jury to screen cases referred to it by the superintendent of police when charges appear to be questionable.

Probably the two trial boards and the civilian review board will be able to dispose justly and effectively of most of the cases brought before them. It is our feeling, however, that on complaints involving private citizens, the trial authority ought to be entirely outside the Police Department. The personnel of such a board might be appointed by the District Court, with the district attorney serving as prosecutor and the corporation counsel aiding in the defense of the accused policeman. This procedure, which is now in use in other cities, would reassure the public that each case would be decided on its merits beyond any suspicion of complicity.

Hour Of Decision

And so, as the result of last Monday's proceedings in Fenway Park, we are plunged headlong into another national crisis over the question whether Mr. Boudreau's Cleveland Indians or Mr. Southworth's Boston Braves is the best baseball club in this somewhat less than perfect world. There are, if we need remind you, at least important distinctions between this crisis and the crisis which has arisen over the possession of Berlin. First, the matter of the Braves and Indians will be pretty definitely settled one way or the other before the end of next week. Second, whichever way it is settled, it will probably make no great difference to the survival of Christian civilization and the destinies of the greater part of mankind.

There is, come to think of it, even a third distinction. In politics and diplomacy nowadays almost everybody is able to explain the difference between those who are Red or Pink and those who are representative of other parts of the spectrum. But even the most learned students of baseball would be hard put to explain the precise difference between a brave Indian and an Indian Brave.

This probably explains why the editors of the New York Daily Worker are a bit puzzled about how to analyze the crisis in terms of the Marxist dialectic. Nominally speaking, one club is apparently just as Red as the other; but ethnologically-speaking, neither club, as far as we know, has on its roster even one noble redman; nor for that matter have our own Washington Redskins. Indeed, the only major league baseball or football club we can think of whose name seems quite congruous with its composition is the Philadelphia Athletics.

Anyway, the Daily Worker finds both the Braves and the Indians symbolic of the triumphant proletariat. It calls them the "have nots" of baseball, observing that the one club has not had a pennant in 34 years nor the other in 28 years. But it would seem to be the Braves who offer the better analogy, seeing that they have spent most of the last three decades in the slums of the National League, whereas the Indians have been, so to speak, petit bourgeois.

Answer To Moscow

The Security Council's decision to take up the Berlin crisis means that it has quietly ignored Mr. Vishinsky's nonsense about the American-British-French complaint violating Article 107 of the United Nations Charter. Before acting, however, the Council thoroughly explored the background of Article 107. Moscow was allowed to make its case. Most of the world knew that Mr. Vishinsky was trying to make white out of black, that there was neither substance nor sincerity in his contention that the Security Council lacked jurisdiction in this case because it involves issues growing out of World War II. By patiently listening to flimsy arguments and acting firmly in conformity with the Charter the Council has returned precisely the right answer to Moscow.

Article 107 does exclude from operation of the Charter the actions of the victorious powers in dealing with the enemy states of World War II. This section is part of Chapter XVII, which provides for transitional security arrangements. It is well to remember that the Charter was drafted while the Allied Powers were still at war with Japan and before any peace settlements had taken definite shape. By Article 107 the victorious powers sought to protect themselves against appeals to the U. N. from enemy states so that they would be free to carry out any measures they might deem necessary to prevent those countries from going on the warpath again. No one thought of suggesting at the time that this provision might be invoked to prevent the Security Council from entertaining a complaint by one of the victorious powers against another.

If there had been any intention to exclude from the Security Council all issues in any way connected with World War II, the delegates at San Francisco would have written in specific language to that effect, as they did in Article 2, to prevent U. N. intervention in any nation's domestic affairs. The United States delegation at San Francisco pointed out in connection with Article 107 that "nothing should be included in the Charter which would hinder action against the enemy on the part of the victors in World War II." Other references are similar. The committee which considered this section of the Charter reported: "It is understood that the enemy states in this war shall not have the right of recourse to the Security Council or the General Assembly before the Security Council gives them this right."

There appears to be nothing in the history of the Charter that lends any support to the distorted interpretation the Russians are giving to Article 107. On the other hand, there is the positive and impelling language of Article 24, which confers on the Security Council "primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security." No word or phrase hints at suspension of this obligation during the period while the major powers are trying to make peace. Nor is there the slightest indication that the Security Council should remain aloof because the source of the dispute is a former enemy country. The Security Council's courageous interpretation of the Charter as meaning what it says is tonic for a world that craves facts and common sense in place of propaganda and force.

Bipartisan Policy

Senator Vandenberg's restrained accounting for Republican stewardship under the United States' bipartisan foreign policy is another example of political finesse. He shrewdly avoided any rabid partisanship. He claimed no monopoly of credit for the Republican Party because Democrats and Republicans are now working together to carry out one foreign policy on which all the Nation is united. Rather, he reserved most of his praise for the bipartisan idea itself. His proudest boast was: "We cooperated." And the gist of his report to the people was that the bipartisan policy has been a success for which the leaders of both parties are entitled to generous credit.

This sort of candor is impressive, in our opinion, because it can be taken at face value. Even more important, it demonstrates a high sense of responsibility on the part of Mr. Vandenberg as the chief Republican policy-maker in foreign affairs during recent years. Mr. Vandenberg has managed to convey the impression that his party places continuation of the existing bipartisan policy for the achievement of "peace with justice" ahead of its own success at the polls. That might seem on the surface to be a very weak bid for votes. In the present context of world affairs, however, we suspect that it is the shrewdest kind of campaigning. For if we read the temperament of the people correctly, their interest in a stable and free world overshadows every other consideration.

The Senator's defense of the Eightieth Congress is by far the most convincing we have heard during the campaigns. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee, of which he is chairman, unanimously approved 19 of the 20 treaties and agreements submitted to it by the President. The committee also considered and approved 31 bills and resolutions by unanimous action of its Republican and Democratic members. All these measures were scrutinized and many were amended, but in the end a single bipartisan policy emerged. Considering the political division between the White House and Congress, this is nothing less than remarkable. "When history is written," the Senator said, "the Eightieth Congress will be remembered for this record in foreign relations long after other relatively transient issues have been forgotten."

We doubt that it will be necessary to wait until history is written. Even today there is widespread appreciation of the fine record of the last Congress in approving aid to Greece and Turkey, the Marshall Plan and the Vandenberg Resolution. The failures of that Congress in many other respects are a fair target, but President Truman has doubtless hurt himself by his indiscriminate attacks upon a legislative body that worked so cooperatively with him in the most important field of public policy. His feud with Congress has actually robbed the President of his fair share of credit for the foreign policy that has been followed. In his efforts to sustain his own charge that it was the "second worst Congress in history" he has left the most significant political story of recent years—that of the successful development of a strong bipartisan foreign policy—chiefly to his opponents. The President's strange preoccupation with those areas of policy in which he was defeated and his relative neglect of the achievements for which his Administration is likely to be longest remembered may well prove to be the greatest mistake of his 1948 campaign.

Latin Investments

Many American diplomatic endeavors prior to and during the Bogota Conference were directed at convincing our Latin neighbors that a hemisphere Marshall Plan is not now feasible. The impression that Latin America wants this type of aid is now contradicted by Dr. Alberto Lleras Camargo, Secretary General of the Organization of American States. Speaking before the Inter-American Council of Commerce and Production meeting in Chicago recently, he declared:

> What the Latin-American countries are calling for is . . . not . . . the underwriting of Latin-American progress by the United States taxpayer, without any benefit to the latter. For this reason the Latin Americans do not refer to a Marshall Plan for their countries; they speak rather of credit and development corporations, or inter-American banks, or of credit plans for the Latin-American governments, always on a basis of reciprocal benefits and as a sound and advantageous arrangement for the United States.

Dr. Lleras does not minimize the economic crisis in which many Latin-American nations find themselves because of the exhaustion of dollar balances and the virtual stoppage of foreign credit. But his foremost plea is for help—principally governmental credit—to break "the vicious circle . . . that prevents the increase of production because there are not enough consumers with purchasing power, and at the same time prevents the raising of the standard of living of those consumers for lack of abundant—that is, economical—production." To understand this problem we must remember, as he reminds us, the wide differences between the economies of Latin-American countries and that of the United States.

Latin countries have, in a sense, skipped the era of economic development in which private enterprise made its greatest contributions in the United States. A considerable amount of socialization is a fact, for lack of private capital often has made the state the entrepreneur for both essential services and essential industries. Governmental intervention in the internal economies will not be halted, he asserts, by treaties or agreements designed to restore for foreign investors' benefit "a situation that has ceased to exist forever in the economic world." In other words, private capital from the United States is sought by Latin America, and a considerable degree of security can be assured it. But such capital will not find the right conditions to operate, Dr. Lleras believes, if there is any attempt to interfere with governmental endeavors to promote programs of "communications, transportation, public education and conservation of human and land resources, none of which should be left to private initiative."

Joining Forces

Following short-lived resistance by the French, top command assignments for the Western Union defense organization have been announced. The French desire to leave the chairmanship open for a possible American general apparently was overruled or withdrawn, and Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery, chief of the British Imperial General Staff, will take the job. A British air marshal becomes commander in chief of the joint air forces, while a French general and a French admiral will assume command of the five-nation ground and naval forces. Ranking Belgian, Dutch, and Luxembourg officers will serve on all staffs.

The naming of certain individuals as commanders in chief of joint military forces under the Brussels pact does not, of course, complete the requirements for constructing a functioning military machine. But it should be recognized as an essential and considerable step forward. It supplements the intangible and tentative plans for common defense that have been under study in London since June, assisted by United States and Canadian observers. By this action the five Western Union nations demonstrate that they have the necessary determination and flexibility, for which we have repeatedly called, to cooperate for their own defense.

In the military sphere, as in the economic, only such evidence of self-help can justify a request for assistance from the United States. Very shortly, however, the Brussels nations will be in a position to request something tangible from this country to put flesh on the bones they have constructed. Whatever strategic and logistic plans the west European nations may work out among themselves, with or without our participation, they can become realities only to the extent that the United States furnishes arms and materials necessary to supplement those on hand in Europe. Our turn to make a counterpart contribution to European military security will come soon.

Mediocre Employes

With reference to all the adjectival phrases being bandied about of late by various and sundry persons, let us look deeper than the written or spoken word. Charges have been made of the "mediocrity" of Government employes. So what?

Funk and Wagnall's College Standard Dictionary defines the word mediocre as "of only middle quality, ordinary, derived from the Latin meaning middle."

Most Government positions require as a minimum educational requirement, that the competitors for such positions have a high school education or its equivalent. A fair proportion of positions require that the incumbent have a college degree. I am quite sure that those standards set up by the Civil Service Commission for positions, which have parallels in private industry, compare favorably with the requirements for private employment.

Since the advent of World War II, draft officials uncovered a greater amount of illiteracy in our country than had heretofore been thought possible. Those people are certainly employed somewhere; however, it follows, that if one must complete certain forms, giving required information, when competing for Government positions, and then compete in a written exam (for most positions then it would be as difficult for an illiterate person to obtain Government employment as it would be for a "mediocre" doctor to perform a delicate surgical operation.

Now if there are many illiterates and they cannot easily obtain Government employment, where else could they be employed than in private industry? Therefore, we come to the conclusion that persons in private employment, taken as an average, should be classed as mediocre or less than mediocre.

Of course the logic in the foregoing paragraphs is disputable, but so is that of the persons who continually deride and vilify the intellectual level of Government employes.

Synthetic Oil

Regarding Harold L. Ickes' letter of September 29 and his previous letter of September 8: Mr. Ickes could speak more authoritatively and constructively on the Nation's oil problem, if he would tell how the investigations of the Interior and Commerce Department scientists and engineers proved there is ample domestic oil forever in the coals and oil shales of the United States — cheaper than average petroleum costs of the past.

In the Government's synthetic oil investigations of the '20s, in which the States of Utah, Colorado and Indiana cooperated with the Federal Government, it was proved that the oil shales could be distilled by several methods and produce crude oil for $1.50 per barrel.

Also it was shown that the bituminous coals could be distilled by the same methods and produce oil for $1.50 per barrel, if no credit were taken for the by-product of excellent, solid, smokeless coal that resulted from the distillation. But it was shown that if this solid smokeless fuel were sold wholesale at no increase over raw coal prices at the mines then the net cost of the "coal oil" would be substantially per barrel less than shale oil. The oil shales give no by-product just a worthless residue of rock after the oil is distilled.

The Interior Department's old publications show that a "coal oil" industry existed in the United States prior to the discovery of the first oil gusher, in which 55 companies manufactured most of the oil from coals and the balance from oil shales. Thirteen shale oil plants were built in Ohio and one was built in Utah and operated by the Mormon pioneers.

Since the early '30s, the technical and economic data have been available in the Interior Department records and at the School of Mines, University of Utah, where the Federal Government's synthetic liquid fuels investigations were initiated in 1919 in the United States Bureau of Mines station. Now the Interior Department, following Ickes' past example, has interpreted the Synthetic Liquid Fuels Act of 1944 as meaning not to use these early methods and proofs of ample cheap oil for the Nation, although the Congress has appropriated 60 million dollars for proving and starting a synthetic liquid fuels industry. Justice Holmes

D. C. Salaries

It is now common knowledge that thousands of District Employes received rather shabby treatment from the Eightieth Congress. In the meantime, however, it is well not to forget certain important details of the salary situation. First, even if the inadequate salary bill considered by Congress in the last days of its regular session had been passed, the teachers would have got a raw deal. It was proposed to give them $200 increase, while the other District Employes would have got $330 cost of living increase.

This may have been due to the mistaken idea that the teachers had an increase of $600 the year before. It cannot be repeated too often that $450 of this $600 had been granted as a cost of living increase the year before and was merely continued. Many District teachers got only $150 in addition to that.

It is also important to remember that increases given so far have failed to keep pace with the rise in the cost of living. That has gone up more than 70 per cent since 1939, while increases for teachers as a whole have not amounted to more than 45 per cent. The same thing has happened to the other District employes. The people of Washington should be fully aware of the bad situation facing their public servants.

The Dangers Of "Unity"

Rather than pursuing his fruitless attempt to get Candidate Dewey to debate specific issues of his choosing, Candidate Truman would do himself and the country a service by making an issue of and debating the point on which Mr. Dewey has taken a firm stand, spiritual unity. Mr. Dewey's, and the general presumption, seems to be that this is something above debate, like mother, home, and Heaven, on which a firm stand is unassailable.

If it is as innocuous as that, well and good. No harm done. But there are enough elements in the national scene today to give a spine-chilling quality to Mr. Dewey's constant harping on this theme. Starting with his acceptance speech at the Republican Convention, this has been the subject which has seemed to interest him most.

What does he have in mind? What does he mean by spiritual unity? Unity has been the rallying cry of too many false causes lately to be taken lightly. It is, for instance, the cry of Communist elements in this country when seeking to rally all liberal elements under their standard, and under their control. In the name of unity Hitler put all of Germany and all of Europe under his control. In the name of unity dissenters in Russia and in countries under Russian domination are liquidated or sent to concentration camps. In the name of unity M. de Gaulle may feel compelled to violate the structure of democracy and take over the government of France.

Obviously, in the framework of our Constitution, Mr. Dewey has nothing of the sort in mind. But what does he have in mind when he talks of unity?

Unity is not a word for democracy. It is a word for totalitarians. It has a quality of mystique about it that is contrary to the spirit of rationalism and scientific inquiry that has had much to do with the acceptance of the idea of democracy.

When anyone uses the word unity, he must be asked "unity on whose terms"? Does Mr. Dewey mean that if he is elected every one will henceforth agree with him? Is that what the Thomas Committee is really getting at? Is that what Mr. Scott meant by his remark about the "best people" being Republicans? Is that what Mr. Dewey's "efficiency" is going to get us, an administrative state, run by elite managers, with congressional committees useful only for stifling dissent?

These are the specters that are raised in the hypersensitive mind by loose use of mystical phrases. One can't help reflecting where use of a mystical term like "the common man," has got Mr. Wallace, and one can't help think of "the managerial revolution" when one hears administrative efficiency spoken of as an end in itself.

Where does Mr. Dewey stand on this? Will he take us, uncouth and squabbling as we are, or unify us spiritually into his own image? The essential of democracy is divergence of views, which is apparent disunity. In the British Parliament, from which many of our ideas of government stem, if there were no opposition, one would be created. Unity is consciously avoided out of the realization of the necessity of opposition as a safeguard on the power of the executive.

We in this democracy are united only in our determination to preserve the right to be free of unity. People came to this country to escape unity, yes to escape spiritual unity. They came to think, speak, worship and assemble as they pleased as individuals. They fled from spiritual unity because it was intolerable.

Surely Mr. Dewey is not in favor of undoing what our forefathers struggled to achieve.

Surely not. But what is he in favor of in advocating spiritual unity? How would he "implement" it? What administrative techniques would he employ? He should be asked these questions in all seriousness.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

30 Days Or 30 Years

THE THINKING of top Air Force generals who believe that a war with Russia could be concluded victoriously within one to three months by a series of atomic-bomb attacks at least has been publicly put on the record. While this was done in such a way as to disclaim any responsibility at the top, it is nevertheless highly significant.

The strategy is disclosed in an article in the Air University Quarterly Review, issued by the USAF's Air University at Maxwell Base, Ala. It is signed by Col. Frederick L. Moore and Col. Cale O. Smith, both Air Force officers on active duty.

While the Review states that articles appearing in it "do not necessarily coincide with nor are they officially those" of the USAF, the strategy outlined parallels closely that advocated by Air Force policy-makers. Naturally, the article is based on war with a theoretical "enemy," and the Soviet Union is not mentioned.

The claim is advanced that a very small number of bombers—perhaps only 300—could carry atomic bombs to the enemy's strategic centers in a series of concentrated attacks. These would destroy "a nation . . . just as surely as a man will die if a bullet pierces his heart and his circulatory system is stopped."

This is the line taken by the USAF policy chiefs in discussions with the Joint Chiefs of Staff. What has not been known is that these discussions have evoked a hot argument.

In both the Army and Navy there are skeptics who doubt the extraordinary claims made by the Air Force. One of the most outspoken of these skeptics is Fleet Admiral William D. Leahy, Chief of Staff to the President.

LEAHY has said bluntly on several occasions that he simply does not believe the claims of those who maintain that a lightning atomic war would pulverize the enemy's military drive. The two air officers in their article argue that an "army in the field," cut off from supplies and facing starvation "is not an enemy to fear." This conventiently ignores the fact that Russian armies, invading Germany for the most part, lived off the land.

Leahy's bluntness has not endeared him to top brass in the Air Force. Inspired stories have recently appeared suggesting that President Truman was dissatisfied with his personal Chief of Staff and therefore disregarding his advice.

Another skeptic is Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Chief of Staff of the Army. Bradley is less blunt than Leahy, but he is no less outspoken in the strategy discussions. He has expressed the belief that a war with Russia might last 30 years or longer, with the Air Force performing brilliant feats in the first few months.

The concentrated atomic attacks would fail, however, to reduce Russian resistance. They might, because of the slaughter of millions of the civilian population, instill a fight-to-the-last man psychology. The centers of Communist power would be transferred, along with Russian armies, to western Europe.

As skeptics such as Bradley see it, the retaking of Europe would be a far more difficult task than it was in the war that ended three years ago. That would require several years of intensive preparation by American industry and the military, with the possibility of interruption by bombing attacks.

In the two views—that of the Air Force and their doubting critics—there is an infinity of difference. As it was put by one of the participants in these heated discussions:

"You take your choice—30 days or 30 years."

Hanson Baldwin, the military expert of the New York Times, pointed out in an article this week the extent to which Air Force generals by their writings had sought to influence public opinion. He cited the inflammatory statements made both by men in uniform and by the civilians at the head of military departments.

One of the ablest writers on military problems, Baldwin made it clear that he regarded this as an ominous development. It has been pushed to such a point that it seems as though military men rather than diplomats were making our foreign policy.

How ominous it really is can be measured by the disagreement between the men in uniform who would conduct another war. There is a terrifying difference between 30 days and 30 years.

Everglades Park

Ranking in interest with the cedars of Lebanon, the ironwood eucalyptus of west Australia, the maidenhair tree or ginko of Japanese temples, the monkey-inhabited deodars of the lower Himalayas, are royal palms.

The royal palms' primeval forest northern limit is the new Everglades National Park in Florida. This forest extends across Cuba, down into the golden monkey jungle of south Brazil.

It is said 25 million visitors thronged the National Parks last year. These still are mostly in the Far West. When Everglades National Park has a ranger naturalists staff, that 25 million will be vastly increased. This because Everglades National Park is reachable overnight from a dozen thickly populated States. H. G. STEEL.

Big Businessmen, Little Politicians

CHICAGO.—If Gov. Thomas E. Dewey is the modern-minded Republican he claims to be, he cannot much like many of the coattail riders he is likely to help reelect this year. Dewey is anything but nonpartisan. Yet one would think he might actively prefer the Democrats here in Illinois, where the ancient Republican system of government by big businessmen and little politicians has been carried to such a peculiar extreme.

There is only one big businessman, Col. Robert R. McCormick, and he runs both the Governor and the Republican Senator. The redoubtable colonel forcibly imposed the brassy Senator C. Wayland Brooks on the Illinois Republican organization, which had the good taste not to like the man. Brooks has belonged to McCormick ever since and still does. As for the Governor, Dwight Green, he was originally the protege of Chicago's other colonel, the late Frank Knox. But Green also belongs to McCormick now, as the Republican convention at Philadelphia rather ludicrously proved.

At Philadelphia the naive Dewey managers could not believe the Governor of a great State, at the head of a delegation of State payrollers, was not the master of his soul. They wanted to do a deal with Green. The unhappy Green desperately wanted the vice presidential nomination and began negotiations.

BUT McCORMICK wanted Senator Robert A. Taft, and it was as though a little white poodle in a vaudeville dog act had scuttled to the corner of the stage to commit a nuisance. The terrifying trainer cracked his terrible whip. The little poodle ran back to its place, put its paws under its chin and pretended nothing had happened. To the bitter end, at McCormick's word of command, and despite his yearnings for the vice presidential nomination, Green stuck with Taft's candidacy. It was the strongest showing of personal power in recent political history. And no one can doubt that Green at least has the virtue of obedience.

Green's State administration has little else to boast of, however. Its general flavor is best suggested by the big campaign issue centering around the Centralia mine disaster. A close connection is publicly charged between this ghastly tragedy, the peculiar immunity of the mines to State inspection and certain large payments into the war chests of the State Republican organization. And these charges have not been convincingly refuted.

The real irony of the situation lies in Dewey's position, however. After bitterly opposing Dewey at Philadelphia, Colonel McCormick is giving the merest lip service to Dewey's candidacy. Meanwhile, the Chicago Tribune daily flails Dewey's chief foreign adviser, John Foster Dulles, as a sinister Leftist. Yet if Dewey did not head the Republican ticket, the two McCormick men, Governor Green and Senator Brooks, would be in grave danger of defeat. With one hand, Green and Brooks clutch Dewey's coattails; in the other hand, they hold a dagger to stab Dewey in the back later on.

THE ILLINOIS Republicans need Dewey's help for two reasons. The Wallace party has been ruled off the ballot. And the Democrats have nominated the forceful, public-spirited Adlai Stevenson for the Governorship, and for the Senatorship, the able, progressive Paul Douglas. Stevenson is a rich man, bears an honored Illinois name and will attract many normally Republican voters. Douglas is a liberal professor, served conspicuously well in Chicago city politics, has a superb war record and enjoys solid, impassioned labor support. Both are making energetic campaigns. With all their differences, they are exactly the sort of men the Democrats need if they are to make a comeback.

The Republicans are countering the Stevenson-Douglas threat by spending $20 for every $1 of the Democrats and by using some pretty crude campaigning weapons. Douglas, for example, is both a severely wounded Marine veteran of the Second World War and outstanding among American progressives for his unyielding fight against the Communists. Yet Representative Fred Busbey, a minor league "Curly" Brooks, is quartering the State howling that Douglas is a "Red." This is only one more instance of a dangerous practice. (It will be impossible to solve the serious Communist problem, if the debate is to be dominated by the mindless bellowing of squalid hacks.)

Nonetheless, impartial observers of both parties concede that Stevenson and Douglas have a definite outside chance to defeat Green and Brooks. The polls give Dewey a 9-point margin over President Harry S. Truman in Illinois. If 5 per cent of the voters split their tickets—as a good many are expected to do—the McCormick men will be beaten.

More probably, of course, the McCormick men will win. But this will only be because the voters think Dewey is different and does not mean government by big businessmen and little politicians. If the future proves the contrary, the political consequences are likely to be volcanic.

Republicans Might Make West 'Colony' of East, Says Barkley

Greeley, Colo., Oct. 5 (AP).—Senator Alben W. Barkley, Democratic vice presidential nominee, declared here tonight a Republican victory in November might return the West to "the status of an economic colony of Eastern finance."

In a speech prepared for delivery at the Colorado State College of education as he pushed his airborne campaign further westward, the Kentucky Senator attacked the GOP power policy and pointed to what he said was Democratic friendliness to the West's reclamation program.

Hoover Veto Cited

Typical of the attitudes of the two major political parties, he said, was Herbert Hoover's veto of the Muscle Shoals bill in 1931 and enactment of the Tennessee Valley Authority Act by the Democrats two years later.

Under Democratic administrations, Barkley said, reclamation has been getting ample Federal support and "today more than five million acres of formerly barren wastes have been provided with the water to make them into rich farm lands."

Power capacity installed on reclamation projects, he added, has grown from 106,000 kilowatts to almost three million kilowatts under Democratic impetus.

Issue Called National

"This is not merely a local or a regional issue," Barkley said. "It is a national issue. The development of the West is part and parcel of our national development. National progress cannot tolerate discrimination against the West for the protection of older and less efficient industries in other areas."

Because of Democrats' interest in further development of the resources of the West, Barkley said, "all the big campaign money has been going, as usual, to the Republicans rather than the Democrats."

"The big financial groups who back the Republican Party," he said, "want to make sure that their present interests are guaranteed protection against the threat of competition from he new West."

Civic Group Backs Bonds

The Arlington Civic Federation last night indorsed a $4,750,000 bond issue sought by the Arlington School Board to provide new school buildings.

The Federation acted after hearing a report from School Board Member Mrs. Edmund Campbell who warned that the Arlington school population will double within the next six years, and that increased classroom space was "the only solution."

In its resolution, the Federation authorized its president, Mrs. Ruby Simpson, to appoint a representative to serve on the Coordinating Council for the Arlington School Bond Campaign.

The council, representing several Arlington civic groups, is working for the bond issue.

Mrs. Campbell told the federation that "unless we can care for our children's education, we will have increased problems in delinquincy."

Wallace Calls Major Parties Avid 'Octopus'

Sacramento, Oct. 5 (AP).—Henry Wallace did battle tonight with what he called the "bipartisan octopus."

His campaign speech prepared for delivery at Sacramento's memorial auditorium was based entirely on the theme of the "common man" versus an octopus that grabs wealth, engages in "red-baiting," smashes unions, fosters inflation, and wages a "cold war."

He defined the octopus as the "greedy power" that stands between the people and the "promise of abundance." At times he identified the octopus with the Pacific Gas & Electric Co., the railroads and other financial interests.

Assails Warren Again

And he brought the Democrats and Republicans into the picture when he said: "Like our government today, the octopus is a bipartisan animal. He has one arm curled affectionately around the neck of the elephant and a firm grip on the donkey's tail."

The Progressive Party candidate for President, after speeches in Los Angeles, Bakersfield, and Fresno, flew to San Francisco today in his chartered plane.

His schedule called for a side trip to Sacramento for tonight's speech, then a return to San Francisco where the candidate has a full day of campaigning Wednesday.

Wallace continued his daily attacks on California's Governor, Earl Warren, who is the Republican candidate for Vive President.

"If Governor Warren were really fighting the octopus," Wallace said, "I assure you, from personal knowledge, he would not have the backing of the Pacific Gas & Electric, the Bank of America, the oil and shipping and farm monopolies—the (Senator William F.) Knowland machine—or Herbert Hoover."

Likens Spy Probers to Squid

Wallace said only through the Progressive Party can the people enforce their will and get rid of the octopus.

The common man everywhere, Wallace declared, has "seen the bipartisan octopus grab at your land, your gold, your oil, your lumber, your indispensable water and your public power."

"Now," he continued, "you see him reaching out to check off your most precious heritage—coiling his bipartisan arms around the Bill of Rights, paralyzing you with the poison of red-baiting, while the squid dirties the water with fantastic spy scares to distract you from the bipartisan smashing of unions, bipartisan inflation, and the bipartisan 17-billion-dollar 'cold war.'" economical levels and the comparatively heavy vote cast.

The probable low turnout this year is all the more remarkable because voting rates show a high degree of correlation with education. Although there is a steadily rising proportion of people with the benefits of high school training from one generation to another, this year's turnout estimates, if correct, will compare unfavorably with the last few generations.

The Gallup Poll

Dewey Holds Edge on Truman In 11 of 12 Northeast States

Starting today and continuing for the next week the Gallup Poll will release latest presidential poll figures for each of the 48 States, section by section. Today's report gives the standings of the candidates in the 12 New England and Middle Atlantic States. A report Friday will cover the States of the East and West Central sections, and this will be followed by reports on the Mountain, Pacific Coast and Southern States.

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 5.—In the six States of New England and the six States of the Middle Atlantic section, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey leads today in a total of 11, including Maryland, while President Truman is ahead in one—Rhode Island.

However, it would take only a comparatively small shift of sentiment to give President Truman the lead in Connecticut, Maryland and West Virginia.

Neither of the two major candidates has campaigned intensively in the area yet, but the political scoreboard in the 12 States looks like this as of the first week in October:

"If the presidential election were being held today how would you vote—for Truman, for Dewey or for Wallace?"

New England

	Dewey	Truman	Wall.	Un-dec.
Maine	56%	45%	3%	7%
N. Hamp.	54	36	3	7
Vermont	60	33	1	6
Mass.	50	43	2	5
Conn.	43	39	4	14
R. Island	37	48	3	12

Mid-Atlantic

	Dewey	Truman	Wall.	Un-dec.
New York	47%	34%	11%	8%
N. Jersey	50	38	3	9
Penna.	50	41	3	6
Delaware	49	36	1	14
Maryland	47	44	4	5
W. Va.	49	43	2	6

The above figures are not final reports on each State, for new surveys are now in progress and will continue up to election day. But today's findings are politically interesting at this stage of the campaign for the following reasons:

1. The extent of Republican gains in New England and the Mid-Atlantic area since the last time Governor Dewey ran for President, that four years ago he carried only in 1944, can be seen by the fact 2 of the 12 States, Maine and Vermont, whereas today he is leading in 11.

2. Governor Dewey and President Truman are only four percentage points apart in Connecticut and three in Maryland. In both of those States the candidacy of Henry A. Wallace tips the scales in favor of the G. O. P. in the sense that the Wallace voters would probably have been for Mr. Truman if Mr. Wallace had not thrown his hat in the ring.

The Wallace candidacy does not affect the situation materially in any other State of the 12 except New York.

3. In New York State the Wallace vote is down somewhat from August when a survey by the Institute found him polling 14 per cent, as against 11 per cent today in the Empire State. Despite the loss, the Wallace vote, by splitting the ranks of people who were Democrats in 1944, is the factor which gives the GOP such a large margin in the State.

A factor favorable to the GOP and unfavorable to the Democrats in New York is that voter registration in New York City, normally a Democratic stronghold, fell below expectations, indicating a good deal of apathy on the part of voters. A small voter turnout on election day hurts the Democrats more than the GOP because a large percentage of the stay-at-homes are Democrats.

4. Rhode Island's Democratic Party predilection today is closely in line with its political behavior in recent national elections. In 1944 the State was not only the most Democratic in New England, but the most Democratic east of the Mississippi outside the South. In fact, except for the South, Rhode Island's Democratic percentage of 58.7 was third highest for the Nation in 1944, being topped only by Arizona and Utah.

5. Although the election is only a little less than a month away a considerable number of people still say they have not decided what candidate they favor. The undecided vote in today's poll ranges from a low of 5 per cent in Maryland and Massachusetts to a high of 14 per cent in Connecticut and Delaware.

The large number of fence-sitters at present in those two States is probably a factor favorable to President Truman, as polls have found that the present-day undecideds group contain more people who voted Democratic than Republican in 1944.

He has appeared as guest conductor with virtually every leading American orchestra and has directed performances for both the San Francisco and Chicago opera companies.

Court Hears Md. Dixiecrat Plea Today

Baltimore, Oct. 5 (AP).—States Rights Democrats will get a chance tomorrow to state their case for getting their presidential candidates on the Maryland ballot.

Judge Joseph Sherbow in Superior Court will consider the States Righters' suit filed after their petitions to put their candidates on the ballot were rejected. Secretary of State Bertram Boone turned down the petitions in accordance with Attorney General Hall Hammond's ruling that they had been submitted too late.

Hammond filed a demurrer yesterday asking that the court throw out the case.

If the States Righters lose, Marylanders will still be able to vote for their candidates—Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, for President, and Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi, for Vice President. However, voters will have to write in the names of the eight States Rights electors.

Heavy Quake Recorded in N. Y.

New York, Oct. 5 (NYHT).—A strong earthquake, "far heavier" than the one that took 3238 lives at Fukui, Japan, last June, was recorded in two major shocks yesterday on the Fordham University seismograph, and appeared to center in northern India, the Rev. Joseph Lynch, seismologist, reported.

Father Lynch placed the distance of the tremors at 6400 miles from New York.

After tabulating his results and unofficial reports from other seismologists around the country, he said the quake probably struck somewhere near the Hindu-Kush Mountains in northern India, east of Afghanistan, a relatively unpopulated area.

"It was a ripsnorter," Father Lynch said. "It was easily the biggest quake so far this year."

The first shock was recorded at 3:25 p. m., and the second at 3:28.

Arboretum Rapist's Death Stayed

The scheduled execution of Theodore M. Holmes, 22-year-old truck jumper convicted of raping a 9-year-old girl here, was postponed yesterday until January 15.

The postponement was granted by District Court Judge Edward M. Curran in order that Holmes might apply to the United States Supreme Court to review the case. Holmes was to die in the District Jail electric chair on October 15.

A District Court jury found that on March 18, Holmes, who roomed at 1723 th st. nw., grabbed a child near her home in Northeast Washington, took her into the woods near the Arboretum and there brutally beat and raped her. The jury recommended the death penalty.

GOP Victory Seen By Confident Taft

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), beaming confidence in a Republican victory in November, last night charged President Truman with attempting to "impose police state controls" upon domestic affairs.

The man who was beaten by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey in the race for the Republican nomination for President staunchly defended the record of the Eightieth Congress and boosted the Dewey-Warren campaign.

Speaking before the Dewey-Warren Club of the District of Columbia, he lashed out at what he termed "the ridiculous inaccuracy of many of the President's demagogical statements made far away from the facts . . ."

"There is one great issue between the Republican Party and the President," he asserted, "and that is whether progress in this country shall be based hereafter, as in the past, on American principles of freedom and justice, or whether we shall adopt the road to totalitarian government by a vast Federal bureaucracy with unlimited power and unlimited money."

Warns Against Letdown

Senator Taft claimed that "the situation has never been more promising for Republican victory." But he warned that "the result is still uncertain," and said, "If we let down now, it will be easy enough to lose the few points which indicate success."

Before describing "a great program of American progress" as offered by a "vigorously united" Republican Party, he maintained that President Truman "would impose police state controls over every transaction which takes place in the United States."

He said the theory that "all life must be directed by an all-powerful state dominates the thinking of millions of people." And he contended such was the issue between President Truman and the Eightieth Congress.

Senator Taft charged that the President's program to "fix wages and fix prices and ration all goods . . . federalize all employment offices, repeal the Taft-Hart Law . . . socialize and nationalize the medical profession" would greatly increase the existing expenditures and taxes which "are already so burdensome."

Democratic Revolt Cited

It is not the Democratic Party's program, but that of one wing of the party, he said.

"By his demagogery and name-calling in the campaign, Mr. Truman has alienated many other Democrats from the traditional party position," he added.

Senator Taft predicted that the States' Rights candidate, Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina will carry from "four to six" Southern States.

As for Republican chance in the South, Senator Taft said earlier in the day he thinks the party "has a good chance" of carrying Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee and Florida. He said he believes the Republicans will keep control of the Senate.

The Ohioan excoriated New Deal policies of Government spending as "a convenient political weapon."

GOP Program Outlined

If Dewey and a Republican Congress are in office next year, he said the Government would:

1. Cut down Government spending.
2. Reduce the tax burden as a result of lowered expenditures and more economical administration of Government.
3. Block inflation by limiting credit, expenses, taxes and by educating the people to more saving and less spending.
4. See that all are treated fairly and equally, with equal justice under law and no promises of special privilege to any class.
5. Promote measures dealing with education, health, housing and security, with emphasis on administration at the State and local governmental levels.

At a press conference before his appearance at the Republican rally, Senator Taft made several recommendations and predictions respecting the Nation's future. Among them:

1. It will not be necessary to raise taxes again, but there is little chance for any further substantial reduction.
2. A budget surplus of from two billion dollars to three billion dollars should be in sight before further tax cuts are considered.
3. Former Presidents should be made nonvoting "members at large" of the Senate, with "substantial pensions" for life. (There is no pension provided under present law.)
4. B. Carroll Reece, former Republican national committeeman, has a good chance of being elected Senator from Tennessee.

Anoother talk before the Republican rally was given by Mrs. Charles W. Weis, jr., associate campaign manager for Dewey and Warren. She called upon District residents to "spread enthusiasm" for the Republican cause of "constructive thought, emphasized and strengthened by the forthright approach to all public issues by our forceful candidates."

North Carolina Negro Group Boos Gov. Thurmond on Civil Rights Stand

High Point, N. C., Oct. 5 (AP).—A group of Negroes booed States' Rights presidential nominee J. Strom Thurmond here today after a public address.

Thurmond, Governor of South Carolina, had just told an audience estimated by police at 300 that President Truman's civil rights program would "bring about a total state in America."

As he left the courtroom where he spoke a group of six or seven young Negroes standing in a corridor booed him. He glanced at them and continued walking.

Earlier, he had told a small audience in Winston-Salem that he is not running his campaign for President "on a racial basis."

The States' Rights Party nominee spoke in the Forsyth County Superior Courtroom in the first of seven North Carolina speeches scheduled today. About 100 listeners, including six or seven Negroes, were in the courtroom.

"I expect that Negroes in South Carolina have made more progress during my administration than they have under any other Governor," the candidate said.

He reiterated previous charges that the end of segregation, as advocated by other candidates, would be "impractical" and unwise.

He charged also that President Truman had "jeopardized the safety of the country" by ordering an end to segregation in the armed forces.

"Any man who would jeopardize the safety of the country for a few minority block votes is not fit to be President," he asserted.

Court Rules Against Oklahoma Dixiecrats

Oklahoma City, Oct. 5 (AP).—States' Rights Democrats of Oklahoma lost their chance today for a court order to get on the general election ballot November 2.

The Oklahoma Supreme Court ruled, without dissent, that the party had not met requirements of the mandatory primary system law.

"The names of nominees for candidates of a political party chosen or designated in any other manner than the primaries may not go upon a general election ballot," the court said.

The party was formed at a State convention August 14 to support Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina for President.

Pro-Truman Democrats Active in Mississippi

Jackson, Miss., Oct. 5 (AP).—A pro-Truman Democratic Party is open for business in Mississippi.

It was organized yesterday at a meeting of 55 of the President's supporters—who attacked the States' Rights movement as negative and unrealistic and told the South that preservation of its way of life lies with the National Democratic Party.

The Trumanites recently qualified a slate of electors pledged to Mr. Truman and his running mate.

Scientists Studying Signals from Space

Ithaca, N. Y., Oct. 5 (AP).—A new group of scientists and radio-astronomers met today to interpret the radio and radar messages which are pouring into the earth from just about every point in space.

The radio signals are not anything bouncing back like the radar beam sent to the moon. They originate in space.

They tell something about the mysteries of the skies, sun, moon and stars, but their precise meanings are not deciphered.

Today's meeting brought out an amazing variety of these noises, signals or messages. Their wavelengths range from a few inches long to less than an inch.

Some days the face of the sun is angry with the variety and power of radio waves he sends to earth. At other times he is almost peaceful. Sunspots are loudspeakers for the radio noises.

The dish-shaped radar receivers can pick up sunspot messages through clouds, and locate the sunspots emitting them.

The flares of white-hot light that sometimes appear briefly on the sun's face, also shoot out extra radio signals. Any great rise in temperature appears to increase these signals.

The United Naval Research Laboratory in Washington, D. C., has proof that most of the sun signals come directly from the sun and not from the hot million-mile-wide corona that surrounds the sun's face.

The aurora borealis sends radar signals, and from the regions of space inhabited only by stars there are many points which send these short waves to earth.

Australian radio astronomers found one strong set of signals coming from a small area in the sky in which there is nothing visible to telescopes.

Bush Quits as Research Head

pointment of Compton might lead to the adoption of more radical objectives in military research. Bush has the reputation of a conservative, largely gained because he often held down younger researchers during the war years to developments which promised to be of use in conflict.

Deplores Idea Lag

Compton, in an address last winter, declared that the United States lagged behind Europe in original research and new discoveries in science. He deplored the fact that most of our contributions have been to develop new ideas brought forward overseas.

Dr. James Rhyne Killian, jr., 44-year-old native of Blacksburg, S. C., was named to succeed Compton as president of M. I. T. He is the first graduate of the famed engineering school to become its president.

Alexander Refuses to Attend 'Secret' Trial by State Dept.

By the United Press

A secret "trial" of State Department Officer Robert C. Alexander on charges of misconduct had to be called off yesterday when the accused official refused to show up.

Alexander, assistant chief of the department's visa division, boycotted the scheduled hearing and, in effect, challenged his superiors to convict him without a public review of the charges.

Alexander said he would not submit to a secret cross-examination by Arch C. Jean, the State Department personnel chief who was to have decided his case.

The charges stemmed from Alexander's testimony to a congressional committee last summer that subversive aliens were getting into the country under the protection of the United Nations.

His testimony was contradicted by his department superiors all the way up to Secretary of State George C. Marshall. A committee of three private citizens appointed by Marshall to investigate denounced Alexander's allegations as "irresponsible" and untrue.

Alexander, who claims immunity for his congressional testimony, has denied in writing that he was guilty of misconduct and has threatened libel action against the three investigators.

Draft Reheats Deferral Row

mittee officials feel there should be no "piecemeal" draft exemptions by Selective Service until a full-fledged program is thrashed out.

The National Security Resources Board, which will advise the President in this dispute, was created by the National Security Act to give advice to the Executive on all matters concerning coordination of military, industrial and civilian mobilization.

Chairman of the NSRB is industrialist Arthur M. Hill, and board members are the secretaries of the State, National Defense, Treasury, Interior, Agriculture, Commerce and Labor Departments, with committees of specialists operating under them.

Under the Selective Service Act, college students between the applicable ages are automatically deferred from the draft for the balance of this academic year, providing they remain in good standing in their studies. This, in effect, has provided a period of grace for solution of the student-scientists issue.

Special categories of vital occupation, employment or activity may be designed by the President.

An undisclosed number of student scientists will be exempt from the draft through participation in ROTC programs.

Among opposition arguments to deferment of science students is the feeling that this would give them a special advantage over other students, plus the general argument that college students represent the "upper level incomes" of the Nation as a whole, and any deferment of them would be discrimination.

On the other side of the issue, the 1947 report of the President's Scientific Research Board, of which Presidential Assistant John R. Steelman was chairman, said the World War II policy of drafting the prospective scientists, cost the Nation a "net loss" of 40,000 scientists and research engineers, of which an estimated 7600 would eventually have received doctors' degrees.

In the Educational Record of July, 1948, Dr. Leonard Carmichael, president of Tuft College, wrote:

"In spite of the wisdom and high patriotic services of General Hershey and his able associates, the legislation establishing the Selective Service System seems in retrospect to have been in some ways shortsighted and even dangerous . . .

"If another emergency period comes upon us, is it not probable that our Nation has now been taught to recognize that death at the military front is rendered less likely if proper training, war production, and civilian war research are all maintained in proper strength on the home front?"

G. U. Student Named Fr. Gorman's Secretary

Harry Nugent, former State Department clerk enrolled in the Georgetown School of Foreign Service, has been appointed secretary to the Very Rev. Lawrence C. Gorman, S. J., president of Georgetown University, it was announced yesterday.

He fills a vacancy created by the resignation of Eugene L. Stewart, a law school student, who held the post two years. Stewart, former Air Force major who served in the Pacific, assumed new duties this week as a secretary to the judges of the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals. Nugent gave up his job at the State Department to take over his duties at the university.

The fall term was opened formally with services at 11 a. m. in the Andrew Rankin Memorial Chapel after an academic procession from the library.

Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president of the university, welcomed 607 members of the freshman class.

U. S. Coastal Shipping Nears Extinction

(Fourth of a Series.)

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

America's oldest national industry is nearing extinction. Our coastal shipping—which bound the 13 Original Colonies into one country and has served us since in war and peace—is on its last legs.

Mobilized before Pearl Harbor, the United States domestic merchant marine has not revived since VJ-Day. Numerous experts have prescribed remedies, Government commissions have made reports. All tell what to do about the broken up industry.

Yet to date, all the king's horses and all the king's men have been unable to put it back together again.

The problem is a national one—of importance to all of us.

Concern for Defense

For the situation affects not just the shipping operators, labor and the ports. It is of primary concern to the national defense, the State Department and the hardworking chiefs of ECA. Here's what has happened:

Prior to the war some 60 freighters made scheduled runs along the Eastern coastline. Another 50 operated on regular routes from the Atlantic Seaboard to the Gulf. Along the Pacific Coast were 62 other such general cargo craft. A score of passenger ships carried honeymooners and vacationers in Atlantic coastal waters.

Today there are no passenger craft in the entire coastal trade, and no general cargo service in the Atlantic. Nine freighters ply between Pacific Coast ports and 20 ships operate from Gulf harbors to the East Coast. Some little bulk shipping remains.

It adds up to 69 vessels—some of them Government owned and maintained in the service just to keep it going temporarily—compared with 235 vessels operating before the war.

The intercoastal and other domestic traffic—to Alaska, Hawaii and Puerto Rico—is better off but still in bad shape.

Merchant Marine Backbone

Historically, however, America's domestic shipping has been the backbone of the United States Merchant Marine. In 1939, it made up two thirds of our entire active fleet. A large portion of the ships used in the North African invasion, in the supply lines to Guadalcanal, Britain and Murmansk came from the coastal route.

If we fight again, we will need a strong merchant marine—ships, trained crews, terminal facilities, a shipbuilding industry, repair drydocks—to wage offensive warfare overseas, far from the homeland. Loss of close to two thirds of our prewar merchant marine will be a body blow to national defense unless compensated for elsewhere.

At the moment, our merchant marine is larger than it was before the war. Our foreign trade fleet is many times that of 1939. But if we are to have a maritime industry of the size held necessary by defense chiefs we must (1) keep up most of our present foreign trade or (2) restore our domestic shipping. In order to maintain our foreign merchant fleet at such a level—three or four times the prewar size—we will have to cut into the foreign trade of the Marshall Plan nations.

In the latter case, we will make western Europe pay dollars to ship goods across the Atlantic on American ships instead of earning dollars by shipping on their own available vessels.

We've got to do it to maintain a minimum merchant marine for national defense and essential trade, to a considerable extent because we've let our domestic shipping trade die on the vine.

In other words, we could help revive western Europe and fight communism at lower cost if we could restore our coastal and intercoastal shipping. The reasons we have not done so are very clear:

(1) The railroads, trucking companies and inland water shipping firms moved into the vacuum when the domestic ships went to war. They took over the business and have held onto it.

(2) For years previously coastal shipping was in the doldrums and only aged vessels were employed. Maritime firms have not been able to buy new ships or war-built craft to replace the prewar vessels because of the gap between what the Government paid for the old ships and the inflated postwar values of replacements.

(3) Railroads have established discriminatory freight rates between coastal cities, which make it unprofitable for shipping firms to go back into the coastal business. The Army and Navy and Maritime Commission have been urging the Interstate Commerce Commission for three years to do something about this obviously unjust situation, but to date nothing has happened.

(4) Equally or more important than such competition are the extraordinarily high operating costs of shipping compared with land transportation. Crews' wages, which have mounted well beyond the national average since before the war, are only part of it. Loading and unloading charges, according to the report of President Truman's Advisory Committee, account for 50 per cent of the operating costs of each voyage!

Alive to the importance of reviving domestic shipping by cutting cargo handling costs, the President's Committee last year urged:

"That the Government sponsor a concerted cooperative effort on the part of shipping companies, shippers, ship designers, maritime labor, port authorities, and interested Government agencies to develop means of reducing cargo handling cost both aboard ship and ashore."

To date little seems to have been done on this score. Operators say that longshoreman "featherbedding" practices block reform. Labor denies this and claims that the leading companies refuse to spend the money to modernize. Maritime Commission Chairman W. W. Smith "hopes" that something will be done, but—despite the Advisory Committee's recommendation—declares that the responsibility for action rests with industry.

Meanwhile nothing happens, the domestic shipping industry fades and our over-all merchant marine situation grows worse and worse.

Device Measures Tiny Bits of Time

Operations of a naval testing instrument so sensitive it measures time lapses in the firing processes of large naval guns were described here yesterday to electrical engineers.

The comparatively lightweight instrument should also aid in locating and charting underground oil wells, according to one of its inventors, George L. Beyer, jr., physicist, of the Naval Ordnance Laboratory, here.

He spoke before a session on electrical instruments, at opening of the three-day Middle Eastern District meeting of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, at Hotel Statler.

The strictly postwar electronic device is called a six-trace cathode ray oscillograph. Though "essentially perfected" in 1944, manufacture of the first 10 was completed only last year, Beyer, said.

Among measurements it makes, said Beyer, are the time it takes from the throwing of the switch to the burning of the electric primer in a shell, to the explosion of the powder in the missile, and the time records of the building up of pressures in the gun barrel even while the projectile is leaving the gun.

It can make similar records of firing processes in the far more complicated mechanisms of torpedoes, he said.

For use in locating oil deposits underground, he said, the device records sound waves from small explosive charges set off at various points. By the time lapses of the waves, he said, it is possible to determine the underground mediums through which they passed, including oil deposits, if there.

The machine, including its power unit, weighs about 270 pounds, and takes up less space than an apartment unit refrigerator.

D. C. Draft Machine Near Full Swing

Virtually all 15 District draft boards are meeting now at regular, once-a-week intervals to classify Washington's 53,000 Selective Service registrants.

With 1-A registrants reporting daily to the Army and Air Force recruiting station, 403 10th st. nw., for predraft physical and mental examinations, Frank D. Norton, deputy District draft director, said yesterday that local Selective Service machinery is "rolling smoothly."

Nine men were examined Monday as the preinduction examination program, aimed at meeting the November call for 55 District men, got under way. Another seven men were tested yesterday. Twelve will report today.

The following meeting schedule, tentative as yet for a few of the boards, has been set up, Norton announced. Unless otherwise indicated, meetings are at 8 p.m. at draft headquarters, 19th and D sts. nw.

Boards 3, 6, 9, and 13 meet every Monday; Board 5 meets Tuesday; Board 2 (at 4 p.m.), 11, and 15 meet Wednesday; Boards 7 and 14 meet Thursday; and Boards 1 (2:30 p.m.), 4 and 8 meet Friday. No regular days have been decided for Boards 10 and 12.

While most draft board clerks have sent questionnaires from the 25-year-old age group down to the 20-year-olds, mailing of questionnaires has now been suspended while the clerks sort each registration card into its proper board area. Then mailing will be resumed to men of 19.

Examined yesterday at the Army and Air Force recruiting station, 403 10th st. nw., were:

Dan Greene Bradley, 3880 Rodman st. nw.; Werner Carl John, 2738 Ordway st. nw.; Hal H. Rice, 2929 McComb st. nw.; Edwin A. Schell, 4104 Harrison st. nw.

Daniel M. Donohue, 1427 Foxhall rd. nw.; Edward L. Ghormley, 6517 32d st. nw.; and John Edgar Miller, 4827 Davenport st. nw.

Famed Submarine, Skate, Sunk By Navy in Test Bombardment

San Diego, Calif., Oct. 5 (AP).—Navy bombardment today sank the war-famous U. S. submarine Skate, and the troop transport Crittenden.

The two vessels were battered in a thunderous shooting war test off southern California.

Bombers finished off the Skate.

The 5-year-old submarine—survivor of seven war patrols in which it sank 129,000 tons of Japanese shipping—thus gave its last service.

It went down in the ocean depths northwest of San Clemente Island.

The Crittenden followed—victim of progressive air and warship bombardment.

The Skate and the Crittenden, a wartime attack transport, were two more of the Bikini atom-bomb ships marked for destruction because of radioactivity.

High Army, Marine and Navy officers watched the demonstration—part of the largest amphibious exercises ever held in peacetime.

Little Planes Hop to Hawaii

Honolulu, Oct. 5 (AP).—Twelve single-engine Navy combat planes hippity-hopped 2400 miles to Barbers Point, Hawaii, from Moffett Field, Calif., today in 11 hours and 53 minutes.

The short range aircraft made two fueling landings on the carriers Princeton and Tarawa stationed at 800-mile intervals on the way. The Navy staged the flight—first of its kind—to show how such planes can be ferried across the ocean if necessary.

The flight leader was Lieut. Comdr. William S. Bingle of Nashville, Tenn.

The Navy arranged the flight to demonstrate, it said, "fast and practical" ferrying of short range aircraft over vast ocean distances by the shortest geographical point-to-point route.

Bone-Pinning Seen As Gaining Ground

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

The setting of fractures by bone-pinning techniques will rebound from its wartime setback and become the operation of choice in the future, an exponent of the surgical art predicted here yesterday.

Dr. Roger A. Vargas, surgeon of San Bernardino, Calif., addressed some 150 specialists of the Ambulatory Fracture Association at the ninth annual meeting of the organization, at Hotel Mayflower.

Declaring it "common knowledge" that the Army scrapped its intensive program during the war and return to plaster cast methods for healing broken bones, Dr. Vargas said, "it is also common knowledge that the fault was not in the method but in its users."

"Instructors Not Trained"

"The majority of (Army) instructors were not qualified nor trained for its use, and at times were totally unaware of the basic principle of fracture treatment," Dr. Vargas declared.

The technique for bracing broken bones, termed skeletal fixation, consists of drilling holes in the bone above and below the break, screwing in metal anchor pins and splinting the break with metal rods bolted to the pins. A not uncommon operation for the past nine years, it gained considerable but momentary headway with Army preparations for its large-scale use.

"Method of Choice"

By better understanding of the principles involved and the advantages gained, Dr. Vargas said, skeletal fixation operations "should become the method of choice."

Another speaker, Dr. W. A. McNichols, of Dixon, Ill., reported successes in the treatment of 130 fracture cases by the new technique. These included 30 fractures of the jaw and other facial bone fractures in which such operations "are particularly desirable," he said.

Formerly, Dr. McNichols said, broken jaws were set for healing by wiring the jaws together for periods up to six and eight weeks. With skeletal fixation procedures, he said, the patient is able to eat almost immediately, or "as soon as the soreness has left the flesh."

Red Blood Cells Must Be Kept Up If You Want To Feel Alive

Thousands Now Regaining Old Time Pep, Vigor and Drive By Releasing Vibrant Energy To Every Muscle, Fibre, Cell

Overwork, undue worry, and lack of certain foods often reduces the red-blood strength—and starved, weak, puny blood just hasn't the power to keep up your energy and drive.

Every day—every hour—millions of tiny red-blood-cells must pour forth from the marrow of your bones to replace those that are worn-out. A low blood count may affect you in several ways: no appetite, underweight, no energy, a run-down condition, lack of resistance to infection and disease.

To get real relief you must keep up your blood strength. Medical authorities, by analysis of the blood, have by positive proof shown that S.S.S. Tonic is amazingly effective in building up low blood strength in non-organic nutritional anemia. This is due to the S.S.S. Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, S.S.S. Tonic helps you enjoy the food you eat by increasing the gastric digestive juice when it is non-organically too little or scanty—thus the stomach will have little cause to get balky with gas, bloat and give off that sour food taste.

Don't wait! Energize your body with rich, red-blood. Start on S.S.S. Tonic now. As vigorous blood surges throughout your whole body, greater freshness and strength should make you eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better, have a healthy color glow in your skin—firm flesh fill out hollow places. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle from your drug store. S.S.S. Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

Polio Strikes 3 More Here

Three new polio cases were reported in nearby Maryland and Virginia yesterday, raising the Greater Washington year's total to 193, as compared with 44 for this date last year.

The cases were in 11-year-old boy of the 6900 block of Wapakoneta rd., Silver Spring, Md., who was admitted to Children's Hospital; an 11-year-old girl of the 3700 block of Andover pl., Silver Hill, Md., who entered Gallinger Hospital, and a 36-year-old woman of the 6600 bloc of 16th st. North, Arlington, Va., who entered Gallinger.

The year's total for nearby Maryland and Virginia is now 90 and the District total is 103.

Schafer Raps City Council

Dr. W. Lewis Schafer, Alexandria City health officer who resigned his post Monday, complained yesterday that the City Council appears to know "more about public health than the health officer."

Dr. Schafer, who had served as health officer since 1929, said his resignation would become effective October 19. He gave three major reasons for his action:

1. Inadequate salary of $6000 annually for the health officer.
2. Inadequate budget for the health department. Dr. Schafer said you "cannot run a service unless you have the money." He explained he had been unable to get adequate personnel and equipment with funds available.

Health Rules "Not Adequate"

3. The city's regulations governing health are "not adequate." It was here that Dr. Schafer charged City Council interference had hampered his work.

His action was the latest development in a mounting controversy over the city's health program.

Recent criticism was started by a pamphlet published by the Alexandria League of Women Voters, which jointly censured the department and the council for poor slum conditions, trash and garbage collections, sewage conditions, and the rate of pay of health officials including Dr. Schafer.

A study of Alexandria facilities by the State Health Department now is in the hands of the council. Mayor William T. Wilkins said yesterday he expected the full report would be released "probably Friday."

Dr. Shrop Invited

Meantime, City Manager Nicholas Colasanto said he had accepted Dr. Schafer's resignation and had written Dr. Theodore R. Shrop of Ellicott City, Md., to see if he would take the job.

Dr. Shrop had served as acting city health officer in 1944-45 while Dr. Schafer was in service with the Navy. Colasanto said he also would ask for applications from others desiring the health officer's job.

Temporarily in charge of the Alexandria Health Department until a new health officer is selected is Miss Mary Carne, supervisor of nursing.

Gallinger Plan for Howard U. Put Into Effect

A contract covering admission of Howard University Medical School personnel to training at Gallinger Hospital was signed yesterday at a meeting of the District Commissioners.

The document was signed by Dr. Mordecai Johnson, Howard University president, and the Rev. Lawrence C. Gorman, S.J., president of Georgetown University. Later, Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University, signed the agreement. Both Georgetown and GWU already are training medical students at the city-operated institution.

The contract formalizes a preliminary agreement of last spring under which the Negro medical personnel at Howard will be integrated in the present training program at Gallinger.

At present, instructors from the Howard staff are permitted to bring students to the hospital for observation and preliminary training. Later students will be admitted as internes, and faculty members as attending physicians.

A group of five seniors, including four men and one woman, began studying pediatrics cases at Gallinger on Monday under the direction of Dr. Roland B. Scott, chief of pediatrics at Howard.

Dr. Alvin R. Sweeney, Gallinger superintendent, said the new arrangement "seems to be working fine." Dr. Scott said the Gallinger staff has been "highly cooperative and cordial" and "the work has been going very, very well."

Handicapped Make Job Appeals on Air

By John London
Post Reporter

Maybe you recall Sidney Hautman, wartime B-17 pilot. One of our boys over there and nothing would be too good for him when he came back home—remember?

At any rate, he has an anniversary coming up soon to remind him. Saturday will be exactly five years since his fifteenth, last mission, when a German rocket buzz-sawed his right arm off, just below the shoulder.

Yesterday he marked his wooden anniversary in advance: He appealed in a special broadcast over station WINX for a job.

Degree in Engineering

Sidney, 32, blond and rugged, who lives at 2410 20th st. nw., has a degree in industrial engineering from Carnegie Tech; boxing trophies; three years' experience in hospitals; 18 months experience as chief of prosthetic appliances at the Veterans Administration office in Dallas, Tex.; guts and a smile with no trace of bitterness.

Now he wants to get back to his real love, aviation. Maybe somewhere in the industry there may be a job for him; maybe someone listening to the broadcast . . .

Nineteen other physically handicapped men and women on the broadcast told their stories—tragedies because so many employers still fail to appreciate how able such disabled persons can be as employes.

There was William Aukerman, 38, 1005 Flower ave., Takoma Park, in appearance, the personable man of distinction: in fact, unemployed since August 1.

His background: two terms as Representative in the Pennsylvania General Assembly, 10 years with the State as accountant. Since his war-service appointment to the War Assets Administration lapsed, nine weeks ago, he's been out of work.

It's tough for anyone stricken in the legs with polio to get private employment.

All Want Chance

If only someone would give them a chance, they knew they could prove productive, conscientious workers, all 20 of these variously disabled persons insisted, convincingly, over Jay Owen's broadcast, 1 to 4 p. m., dedicated yesterday to National Employ the Physically Handicapped Week.

Seven were trained at Goodwill Industries, where some 150 handicapped persons currently are learning trades.

Jobs sought ranged from elevator operator to social work. Several phone calls received at WINX during and after the program buoyed hopes of jobs—at least for some.

Jesse James Gold Report Attracts Treasure Hunters

Gads Hill, Mo., Oct. 5 (AP).—A reported discovery of more than $100,000 in a "Jesse James" cave near here is building up treasure-hunting fever in this southeastern Missouri region.

Harry Wilcox caused only a mild ripple of interest when he announced he had found the cave September 23, but the arrival of two United States Treasury agents in an armoured car yesterday set off mushrooming speculation.

A source considered reliable, but who asked not to be quoted by name, said today he had seen more than $10,000 in old gold coins in Wilcox's possession, and that Wilcox had found more than $100,000 in coins and United States currency in the cavern.

Wilcox said he believed the cave had been used as a hideout by Jesse James, the Missouri outlaw, in the 1870s.

Mind-Stimulating Acid Studied at Children's Hospital

The Research Foundation of Children's Hospital yesterday announced opening of a new laboratory to study the metabolism of glutamic acid, hailed as a diet boon to mentally retarded children.

Dr. Bessman

The medical science project was made possible by special contract with the Office of Naval Research, hospital officials said. The program seeks to evaluate scientifically the chemical effect of the amino acid on the brain.

It will augment a current study at Children's Hospital which last December began supplementing the diet of a group of 30 mentally "slow" children with glutamic acid. The feeding program is a project of the hospital's Child Welfare Society, a Red Feather agency.

Heading the new, biochemical phase is Dr. Samuel P. Bessman, who worked on the Columbia tests under Dr. Heinrich Waelsch. Dr. Bessman received his training at Washington University, St. Louis, and was an interne and resident at the St. Louis Childrens Hospital.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Underwriters Here to Name Award Winner

By S. Oliver Goodman

Presentation of the Wilner Memorial Award and an address by Harry S. Redeker will highlight the season's first luncheon meeting tomorrow of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association.

Redeker

Redeker, general counsel of the Fidelity Life Insurance Co. of Philadelphia, will explain how the Revenue Act of 1948 affects the insurance business. More than 250 will attend the session, at which Charles F. Suter, association head, will preside.

The silver trophy will be awarded for the first time. It was donated by Morton H. Wilner in memory of his brother, Bernard, former life underwriter who died in military service. A special committee each year will select an insurance man or layman who is judged to have contributed most to the cause of life insurance in the Washington area. Winner for 1947 will be revealed tomorrow.

Meanwhile, Suter said yesterday that enrollments for a new two-year advanced training course are progressing satisfactorily. Enrollments will be accepted until October 15 and classes will start November 13 in the Acacia Mutual Building. More than 125 agents are expected to take advantage of the special training, sponsored by the National Association of Life Underwriters through the Life Underwriters Training Council.

The new courses, supplementing training which all agents have completed with their own companies, will be available to persons who have sold life insurance for at least a year. The local LUTC committee handling the course includes Charles K. Reid, chairman; Vernon W. Holleman, vice chairman; W. Elwood Baker, George A. Hatzes, jr., Donald Sutherland and Joseph A. Barbeau.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Robert W. Hendee of Colorado Springs, Colo., yesterday was elected president of the American Gas Association . . . New president of International Association of Electrical Leagues, elected at recent convention here, is J. Clark Chamberlain . . . Gerard J. Martin, American Airlines cargo sales representative for Washington, has been assigned to the Richmond office . . . W. A. LeCates has been named general auditor of Sun Oil Co.

NEW BAROMETER: If doctors and dentists' collections are an economic barometer (and some economists believe they are), there is a squall brewing in some sections. The trade publication "Sales Management" reports results of a survey of doctors and dentists in 23 cities and says: "This special survey confirms other information which indicates that business is booming but a multitude of little recessions are operating within the orbit of the big boom." The poll found doctors and dentists have more patients than a year ago, but that a smaller proportion of outstanding accounts is being collected and "people who do pay are less prompt."

ANNUAL ELECTIONS: Stockholders of Julius Garfinckel & Co. reelected Gordon A. O'Neill, William E. Schmid and Sidney F. Taliaferro as directors for a three-year term. Following this, directors reelected officers as follows:

Richard P. Dunn, board chairman; William E. Schmid, president; Elizabeth Fatrall, Gordon A. O'Neill and Arthur Madison, vice presidents; Jennings A. Snider, secretary and treasurer; Irene W. Streeter, assistant secretary and assistant treasurer.

Thomas J. Groom, president; J. Sanders, vice president; Francis E. Boley, vice president and secretary; Thomas J. Norris, cashier; John Monk, assistant vice president; Ernest R. Wilson, comptroller; George E. Cole, William W. Stiver, Frederick C. Loops, Robert M. Lyon and T. E. Elgin, assistant cashiers; Robert E. Kendrick, jr., auditor.

BANK EARNINGS: The National City Bank, second largest in New York City, reported net operating earnings of $14,689,554 for the first nine months this year, equal to $2.37 a share. This compared with $14,572,583 or $2.35 a share in the same 1947 period. Including profits from sales of securities, the bank netted $2.47 a share in the latest period, against $2.84 last year.

ODD LOTS: Business failures in week ended September 30 rose to 112, highest point in about two months, Dun & Bradstreet reported . . . Panhandle Eastern Pipeline Co. has ordered a 50 per cent reduction in natural gas to industrial users in western Illinois . . . Mexico has received an eight-million-dollar loan from two U. S. private banks to complete the highway across Tehuantepec isthmus . . . Beer sales are headed for the highest level in history this year despite a lag during the first eight months, according to forecast at convention of National Beer Wholesalers Association . . . Sunray Oil Corp. has formed a subsidiary to prospect for oil in Canada's Alberta Province . . . A series of hearings on plans to reorganize Central States Electric Corp. opened in Richmond's Federal District Court yesterday . . . Standard Gas & Electric Co. has changed its mind and will offer 250,000 shares of Oklahoma Gas & Electric Co. at competitive bidding, instead of 400,000 shares.

Gas, Coal, Oil Conservation Seen as Vital

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 5 (AP).—Two high officials of the American Gas Association said today the future of the Nation depends on a get-together by producers of gas, coal and oil to conserve fuel.

Hudson W. Reed of Philadelphia, retiring president of the association, suggested a national fuel policy to regulate all types of fuel.

H. Carl Wolf of New York, the association's managing director, said the oil and manufactured gas industries have begun coordination of their research in the production of heat.

Reed spoke at a general session of the association's thirtieth convention. Wolf made his remarks in an interview.

Reed said:

"Gas, oil and coal are inextricably associated, both in the market place and at the source of supply. Gas and oil are produced together, and can be transformed into one another by suitable equipment. Both can be produced by the transformation of coal . . .

"No other country in the world was originally as well endowed in fuel resources. As our industrial development is geared to these plentiful supplies, it behooves us to protect these resources so that our national economy will not be crippled within the next generation or two."

Wolf said industry depends on continued production of heat. The gas industry "right now is in a period of economic unbalance; demand exceeds supply; revenues are insufficient."

The convention also heard from Edmond M. Hanrahan, head of the Securities and Exchange Commission. He said industry is borrowing too much money and "will face the inevitable shakedown that follows prosperity with its capital structures heavily loaded with debt."

Hanrahan suggested raising capital through new common stocks. The gas industry is seeking means to finance a 500 million dollar expansion program in the next five years.

6-Million Rise In Building Permits Listed

Building permits totaling $51,370,347 were issued during the past fiscal year, an increase of $6,639,551 over the previous year, the Department of Inspections reported yesterday in its annual report.

Robert H. Davis, department director, said that 18,411 permits for new construction were approved; 4508 for repair work, and 10 for Government building.

The biggest jump in construction was in apartment houses. Permits for 815 such structures were approved, compared with 230 for the preceding fiscal year.

The permits were divided among the following sections of the District:

Southeast — New construction, $8,526,456; living units, 1480; repairs, $2,854,303.

Southwest — New construction, $608,000; living units, 49; repairs, $714,483.

The department reported progress toward solving the District's smoke nuisance problem. Of 833 railroad smoke observation, only 6.8 per cent were violations, compared with 11.4 per cent during the previous year. Davis reported the Washington Terminal Co. and the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad are substituting diesel engines for steam locomotives, which is helping reduce the smoke problem.

Incinerator Bids Compared In Court Tiff

Day-long testimony on comparative performance of incinerators and an argument over the competitive nature of incinerator bids, yesterday featured the court battle over the Arlington incinerator contract award.

At day's end, Judge Walter T. McCarthy, Arlington Circuit Court judge who is hearing the case, said court will reconvene Thursday morning, when several members of the Arlington County Board which awarded the contract are expected to testify.

Witnesses yesterday were M. H. Klegerman, principal member of Alexander Potter Associates, which evaluated the incinerator bids and Col. John F. Laboon, consulting engineer and chairman of the Greater - Pittsburgh - Allegheny County Sanitary Authority, who designed the Arlington County sewage disposal plant about 10 years ago.

Highlights of the day's testimony was Klegerman's statement that there was competition in the incinerator bids and that the Morse-Bouleger Destructor Co. of New York—which is suing the county as lowest but unsuccessful bidder for the contract—was given due consideration for the award.

The Morse-Bouleger bid of $628,843 was passed up by the county board, which awarded the contract to the Nichols Engineering & Research Co. of New York, whose bid was nearly $18,000 higher. One reason given was that Morse-Bouleger could not qualify under the experience clause stated in the specifications.

Publishers Oppose FCC Rule on News

The American Newspaper Publishers Association announced yesterday that it will oppose the Federal Communications Commission's new wavelength plan, which they said would bar newspapers from the use of radio mobilphones for sending news and pictures.

Hearings on a proposed reallocation plan assigning wagvelengths between commercial enterprises will open today with more than 100 organizations scheduled for appearance.

The plan was characterized by the ANPA as "a flagrant disregard of the public service nature of news dissemination."

Supporting the ANPA will be newspaper-radio specialists from the New York Times, the New York Journal-American, the Baltimore Sun and other newspapers. Individual presentations to the FCC will be made by the New York Daily News, the New York Daily Mirror, the Boston Herald Traveler, the Douglas (Wyoming) Budget and other papers, the ANPA said.

The newspapers will request that a permanent basis be given to the present experimental relay press wave lengths over which news reports and pictures are transmitted, it was announced.

Houlihan Will Take Louisville Chest Post

Jack P. Houlihan, recreation secretary for United Community Services here, has resigned to accept a position as assistant director of the Louisville (Ky.) Community Chest, officials said yesterday.

He has been affiliated with the Community Chest Federation and Council of Social Agencies in Washington for the past three years. He joined the staff here as director of the speakers bureau and radio production upon his discharge from the Navy.

His resignation becomes effective October 18.

Cab Licenses Suspended

Eight District hackers had their cab licenses suspended yesterday for periods of from 7 to 15 days for soliciting passengers at Union Station for out-of-town trips. Another nine charged with similar activities at two local bus terminals were found not guilty.

The District Commissioners invoked the sentences yesterday.

The names of those penalized and the number of days that their licenses were suspended are Elmer and James A. Wyatt, both of 5020 Wisconsin ave. nw., 15 days; Paul T. Hodges and Thornton P. Meadows, both of 642 Chestnut ave., Falls Church, Va., 15 days; Bradford J. Tomlin, 2231 Ontario rd. nw., 15 days; John Lacovaro, 1140 17th st. ne., 15 days; Charles H. Werner, 1806 North Oak st., Arlington, Va., 15 days, and Maurice T. Bonifant, 602 Crossant pl. se., 7 days.

Those found not guilty were Ovid M. Lewis, 2621 South Pierce st., Arlington; Francis Simeno, 2622 13th st. nw.; Alfred T. Allard, 2541 13th st. nw.; Harry B. Weis, 416 37th pl. se.; Edward G. Joseph, 712 A st. se.; Donald H. Williams, 3701 Legation rd., Hyattsville; Douglas B. Haislip, 2225 40th pl. nw.; Simon Volovick, Route 2, Falls Church, and Robert L. Carnes, 415 3d st. nw.

Port Proposal To Get Hearing

A hearing will be held October 15 to consider possible establishment of a deep-water port at Benedict, Md., as an alternative to the long-proposed creation of a deep-water port for Washington.

Brig. Gen. Henry C. Wolfe, District engineer, said the hearing is being held under provisions of the River and Harbor Act of 1946, which called for such an investigation of port possibilities at Benedict, located on the Calvert County shore of the Patuxent River.

The legislation was sponsored by Senator Tydings and Representative Sasscer. On the basis of the hearing, the Board of Army Engineers will submit a report to Congress.

Recommendations for a detailed plan for dredging a deep-water channel for Washington have been approved by Congress, but the necessary funds have never been authorized. The Benedict proposal would involve dredging the Patuxent River between there and Solomons Island, to permit the entry of ocean-going ships.

Backers of the Benedict plan contend it would be cheaper than the proposed dredging of a Potomac River channel. Benedict, a small Maryland fishing town, was founded in 1682, and is about 45 minutes by automobile from Washington.

The hearing will be held in the Cafeteria Building at the Office of the District Engineer, 1st and Douglas sts. nw., at 9:30 a. m. October 15.

Always a TREAT instead of a TREATMENT...

OLD GOLD treats you better because it's a better cigarette!

We say it again: we're tobacco men, not medicine men . . . Old Gold cures just one thing—the world's best tobacco.

Now, doesn't it stand to reason that a company with nearly 200 years of know-how in selecting, curing and blending the world's choice tobaccos must produce a better cigarette?

Isn't it only natural that a better cigarette is better for you?

We believe honest facts will win Old Gold more friends than will "medical claims" based on fanciful evidence.

With every modern safeguard . . . to eliminate harsh tobacco stems . . . to remove irritating dust . . . Old Gold offers you a cleaner, smoother, mellower smoke. In every way it is better for you because in every way Old Gold is a better cigarette.

TO THE MEDICAL PROFESSION we leave—as is right and proper—all discussion as to treatment of your nose, throat, and respiratory tract, if any is needed. To you we say only: Old Gold is as fine a smoke-treat as nearly 200 years' tobacco-experience can produce. And doesn't it seem to you that a real treat like this will treat you right in every way?

One on the Aisle—

Miss Stanwyck Dials for Dewey

By Richard L. Coe

PEOPLE AND PLACES: "Tired of the telephone?" repeats Barbara Stanwyck in Hollywood. "I had the screaming meemies plus sleepless nights while making parts of 'Sorry, Wrong Number'." . . . The gallant Miss Stanwyck was living up to her promise to Paramount to make a few long-distance phone calls around the country about—the odd role she's playing in the murder story which reaches the Warner screen tomorrow . . . Talk about telephones was a natural, for in the making of this picture from Lucille Fletcher's famous half-hour radio drama, Barbara did a 12-day stretch, in an Edith Head nightie, screaming into a phone, the only player on the Paramount set . . . "But that's all behind me now and I feel swell, itching to get back to work. My Hal Wallis contract means I do one a year for him at Paramount and one more as a free lance . . . My next will be for Universal, 'The Gay Goddess,' a yarn about a gambling lady . . . Anything like 'The Lady Eve'? . . . I hadn't thought of that, but it's not . . . Bob's off to Europe," continues the lady who is Mrs. Robert Taylor, "but, of course, he'll do his voting by proxy . . . And, of course, too, I'll be voting for the same Governor Dewey . . . IF he wins will I come to Washington for the inauguration? . . . Sure, he'll win, no doubt about it, but I won't be able to come to Washington if I'm working on a picture in January . . . And I certainly hope I will be working . . . I love it" . . . Which is probably the truth, for Barbara is one of Hollywood's smartest, hardest working actresses . . . "Sorry, Wrong Number" is her fifty-seventh picture since she left Broadway 19 years ago . . . She'd risen from the ranks as a Ziegfeld dancer to stardom with Hal Skelly in "Burlesque." . . . That's a record few stars can point to, but Barbara doesn't bother to look back . . . "There's always a new picture and right now there's the election," she winds up.

HILARY KNAPP prefers to forget it, but almost a full column of "Who's Who in the Theater" lists her roles on the British stage . . . Now she's Mrs. J. Burke Knapp of Chevy Chase, and considers Hilary Eaves a thing of the past . . . But last year Mrs. Knapp walked off with the resident actors' honors in the annual one-act play tourney for the Montgomery Players, who've now lured her into the lead of "Joan of Lorraine," which will be the group's first of four plays this season, opening Saturday night, October 23 . . . Young, almost daringly attractive and blessed with a voice she knows how to use, Mrs. Knapp should make a fine Joan . . . Jane Plummer Rice is directing . . . Further information from Mrs. Irving M. Day, 405 Cumberland ave., Chevy Chase, Wisconsin 4685.

MOUNT RAINIER'S Fire Department, always an active set-up, at least socially, is all out these days for Fire Prevention Week . . . They've scheduled a big, free midnight show at the Kaywood Friday night, with Mike Hunnicutt, the WOL man, as M. C. of a revue titled, "The Flaming Follies of 1948." . . . Comedienne Nora Williams, Ventriloquist Vernon and the Equilibrists, from the Capitol's recent "Going Native," are among the performers . . . Big doings indeed, and it'll get a big publicity play round Cottage City way . . . For handling publicity is Eugene Plummer, Mount Rainier's chief of police, who once gave a certain college boy a ticket for speeding.

THE TRANS-LUX is talking television again . . . This time the World Series has the boys in a tizzy . . . They've tracked down three sets for the newsreel customers, one of which boasts the largest screen yet devised . . . 28" by 36", say they.

COLLEGE PARK is home again to Keenard B. Calfee, a U. of Md. junior majoring in speech and drama, who talks happily of a busy summer on Cape Cod with the Harwich Players . . . K. B. is now whooping about the university's plans for this year . . . There'll be four big ones and at least three of the more intimate, central-stage variety . . . "Our Town" and "Androcles and the Lion" are set.

THE HIPPODROME, faced with Laurence Olivier's vast pull, already being felt in the Playhouse and Little mail orders for "Hamlet," promises two other Olivier hits to keep in the swim, "Wuthering Heights" and "That Hamilton Woman" on a double bill and a return of "Henry V" the first week in November.

HERE TODAY—She may not be looking quite like this, but it's perfectly possible you'll see Jane Wyman sightseeing about town today. With her portrayal of the deaf and dumb heroine of "Johnny Belinda," next week's film at the Warner, touted as an Oscar possibility, Jane's saying hello again to the friends she made here during a week on the Capitol stage with Louella Parsons in the days when she was a pert comedienne and dramatic roles were just a dream

Stassen Heads Drive To Fight Heart Disease

New York, Oct. 5 (AP).—Harold E. Stassen, president of the University of Pennsylvania, has accepted chairmanship of the American Heart Association's 1949 campaign to combat heart disease.

His appointment was announced today by A. W. Robertson, association board chairman.

Stassen said that in the campaign "great emphasis will be placed on the need of public understanding of the problems involved in fighting heart disease."

Ingenious Bank Thief Robs Night Depository

Newark, N. J., Oct. 5 (U.P.).—The FBI joined police today in looking for an ingenious bank robber who literally "bagged" loot of $15,000 to $50,000.

The thief managed to shove a bag into the night deposit chute of the Newark Fidelity Union Trust Co. into which depositors drop their money after hours. When the bag was filled, he came back and pulled the bag out with a hook.

Montgomery Commissioners Void Permit

Montgomery County commissioners, meeting yesterday at Rockville, reversed their action in approving a permit for the J. Enos Ray School kindergarten in a city-owned building in Takoma Park.

The commissioners voted to require the school to file a petition and pay for advertising a public hearing as required by ordinance. Mrs. Alma T. Opal, Takoma Park clubwoman, had objected at the previous commissioners' meeting that granting the permit without a public hearing was a violation of an ordinance adopted recently by the commissioners.

When Mrs. Opal appeared yesterday to continue her objections, she was informed that the commissioners had conferred upon her statements and had decided they would revoke the previously granted permit and require that the application be processed in accordance with the requirements of the ordinance.

Meanwhile, the Takoma Park City Council, which took the first action to permit the private kindergarten to use the municipal building, came in for caustic criticism from the Takoma Park Community League. The league directed five questions to Mayor John G. Post, asking why a hearing was not held, whether the council had considered health and fire regulations, about the city's responsibility as to the children, and about remodeling work being done on the building.

The commissioners also denied renewal of the permit for the Chevy Chase Country Day School, operated by Mr. and Mrs. Stanwood Cobb at 17 Grafton st., Chevy Chase, Md.

War Buildings Bought for Schools

Purchase of 20 prefabricated metal war-surplus buildings, to alleviate congestion in Prince Georges County schools was approved yesterday by Prince Georges County commissioners at Upper Marlboro.

The board appropriated $10,000 to purchase and transport the buildings from Government depots at Linden, N. J.; Buffalo, N. Y., and the Bronx, N. Y. Including dismantling and transportation, the buildings will cost about $500 apiece, it was said.

Purchase of the buildings was approved after School Supt. G. Gardner Shugart told of overcrowding in schools and predicted enrollment next year will increase by 3000 pupils.

Shugart said seven of the buildings will be placed in immediate use and the others will be held for use in the event of further overcrowding.

In addition to the $10,000 purchase cost another $55,000 will be necessary to put the buildings into use, Shugart said. This will include the cost of building concrete bases, installing windows and partitions, insulation, heating facilities and interior refinishing, he said.

Five of the buildings will be used for classrooms at Ager Road, Lincoln and Glen Arden Elementary Schools, Mount Rainier High School and Bladensbudg Junior High Schools. General purpose buildings will be put up at Douglas High School in Marlboro.

School Bond Referendum Petition Filed

Judge Walter T. McCarthy of Arlington Circuit Court yesterday received a petition from the Arlington County School Board to authorize a referendum on floating a $4,750,000 bond issue for school improvements in the county.

The petition was presented by Walter Wakeman, school board secretary, on behalf of more than a thousand qualified voters in the county who had signed the petition.

Judge McCarthy indicated he would hold the petition until October 15. He is then expected to sign an order permitting the referendum at the general election November 2.

On the Town

BELIEVE it or not, hopping from one night club to another night after night can, at times, become a little tiresome. If you do it long enough and often enough you reach a stage where one act begins to look like another and you can tell what comic is stealing jokes from another and how old the joke is. Happily enough, there are a few times when you can watch an act and that act snaps you out of the deep blue rut you've been traveling in. When you run across such an act it's a pleasure to go all out with the bouquets.

Karavaeff

Enter Johnny Mack, tap dancer. Johnny happens to be one of the best examples of below the ankle tappers that we've ever seen, with as clean and smooth a tap as one could ask. Johnny appeared at the Shoreham earlier this year, doing his act on the Terrace. We said then and we want to shout again that he should have been and still should be a headline act. Usually the public doesn't stop to realize that the first couple of acts on the floor are what might be termed "ice breakers." They get the crowd to stop sitting on their hands and in the mood for a little applause. Then on walks the feature act and reaps the happy harvest. While Johnny makes a good ice breaker, he goes over so well with the customers that they're sometimes a little reluctant to see the feature act come on to follow him. What does that add up to? Johnny will be in the Shoreham Blue Room for another 12 days and it's our bet that he'll offer the top entertainment in town for those 12 days. We might add as a final posie that Gene Ford of the Capitol Theater thought enough of his act to let him do three numbers on the Capitol stage, something that's very unusual in a theater.

Jean Warner slowed the usual table talk to a standstill with her "Can't Help Loving That Man." Very nice, Jean.

Howard and Wanda Bell do their level best to break each other's necks with their acrobatics, but always come out balancing. Harold Russell, the young amputee who won the Oscar in "Best Years of Our Lives," was in the Blue Room with his wife. The diners there hadn't forgotten his performance, judging from their applause when Barnee Breeskin introduced him.

THINGS went a little on the poof side last week in the Continental Balalaika revue. Eve Lorele didn't seem to fit the show and owner Mischa Bess pulled her at the last moment. A new dancer will replace Eve tomorrow night. Her name is Anita. She does Spanish and gitana (whatever that is) dances. Curiosity will probably lead us ringside if only for a definition of the word. Karavaeff, the combination comedian and dancer, has been going over with a bang. The crowds seem to like him. His pet line is "Once I was a Russian, now I'm a Continental," which could be a play on the changing of the Balalaika's name before opening this season.

The Sheraton waitresses will be tossing their summer transparent skirts into moth balls soon. Hostess Ann Mazur is in Boston now helping select the new style the girls will wear this winter. According to the release we got, the dresses will "be more streamlined and more revealing." Ye gods!

THIS IS RED FEATHER DAY! Make It MEANINGFUL

REMEMBER—ONE PLEDGE COVERS MANY RED FEATHER SERVICES

Because we have a well-managed Community Chest uniting many appeals, you are called on only once a year for all of them. So when you give, GIVE ENOUGH . . . enough for ALL Red Feather services . . . enough for a FULL year. 104 campaigns in 1.

A Pledge:

$8,000 and up	90	250 and up

This Is My Gift To My Community. This Is the Least I Can Do

THIS IS OUR AMERICAN TRADITION

Long ago our pioneer forefathers had a community chest idea. It took form, among others, of a barn or house raising when a neighbor's barn or house burned down. The community's citizens gathered on an appointed day and in the period from sun-up to sundown raised a new barn or house for their neighbor's needs.

The community chest idea is but the modern version of great-grandfather's barn or house-raising.

Even today this has not been forgotten. Our modern counterpart was demonstrated this past summer when a nearby farm was completely renovated in one day.

Today, the Community Chest acts as your neighborly representative

Indians Rely on Bobby Feller's Fastball Today

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

BOSTON, OCT. 5.—Bucky Harris was rubbed out as manager of the Yankees in a piece of business that took its technique straight from the Hollywood B-pictures. It was the same old chestnut—Flipping on the radio music to full volume to drown out the noise of the fatal shot.

POVICH

The Messrs. Dan Topping and George Weiss, who run the Yankees, picked yesterday to fire Harris when they would be outnoised by the pennant play-off clamor in Boston. Their action scarcely got into the papers on a day when the play-off and World Series frenzy blanketed the sports pages. It amounted to a nice, unembarrassing getaway for the Yankee ownership.

Two days after he had the Yankees battling for the pennant and lost it by only two games, Harris was out as manager, getting a cold heave from the cold Yankee bosses. Certainly he wasn't fired because he was a failure. In two seasons as the Yankees' manager, he won one pennant and barely lost another one with a ball club he was holding together with baling wire in the last weeks of 1948.

HARRIS KNEW HE was going to get the axe last week, and the only thing that would stay it would be another pennant. "I don't know what their gripe against me is, I can't put my finger on it," he said then, "but I'm out. All the papers are writing it and where there's so much smoke there's gotta be fire. They haven't said they wanted me to stay on, and it's clear they don't."

When the blow did fall, it was accompanied by the same old tired wheeze about "Harris and the club coming to a mutual understanding." Harris wanted to stay with the Yankees. Topping and Weiss didn't want him, and their agreement to end it all was about as mutual as those salary contracts the players sign. The one that says "in the event there is no mutual agreement on salary, the club shall set the wages."

One of Harris' troubles was that he was a Larry MacPhail employe, and the Yankees after getting rid of MacPhail last fall were out to eliminate all traces of him. Another of Harris' troubles was Weiss, the general manager, who regarded Bucky at a candidate for his job. And yet another of Harris' troubles was Topping, no giant as a club president.

ONLY A FEW weeks before, Topping fired his football coach, Ray Flaherty, and it was full of portent for Harris. Like Flaherty, who took the Yankees football team into two All-America Conference pennant play-offs in two seasons, and then was fired because he wasn't winning a third straight Eastern Division title, Harris could take no comfort in the fact he was keeping the Yanks up there.

Not even Joe DiMaggio or Tommy Henrich could save his job. The sentiments of these two men, most respected of all the Yankee players and even mentioned as the Yankees' next manager, were well known. DiMaggio had said bluntly that "this club would be crazy to let Harris get away. He's done a great job with this team and they're lucky he wants to stay."

Henrich was saying the other day in Boston that the Yankees had no right to be in the pennant fight down to the last two days, and that Harris had held the team together. "I never played for as fine a manager as Joe McCarthy and I never played for a smarter manager and guttier guy than Bucky Harris," was Henrich's tribute.

MENWHILE, THE BOSTON Braves are having troubles of their own with the World Series opening tomorrow and Cleveland as the opposition. The Braves were at Fenway Park en masse yesterday to scout the Indians in their play-off with the Red Sox, and they got a disturbing eyeful when Cleveland's right handed hitters peppered the left field wall.

They got no comfort out of what happened in the fourth inning with the score tied at 1-1 and the Indians still at bat, after Lou Boudreau and Joe Gordon led off with singles that put men on first and second . . .

"Now they'll bunt," said Braves' Pitcher Red Barrett, as Ken Keltner moved into the batters' box. Sure, that's what they'd do in the National League in that kind of a ball game, but that's not the American League way. Keltner didn't bother with any finesse. His hands sought the knob end of his bat and he belted a three-run homer over the left field wall. "Jeez, they don't bunt," said Barrett sadly.

CLEVELAND'S BRAINS—These four men will do the master-minding for the American League Champion Cleveland Indians against the Boston Braves in the World Series opener today in Boston. Braves Pitch Johnny Sain; Boston Fans Cock-Sure

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Boston, Oct. 5.—For Bob Feller, the long, 12-year trail toward a World Series battle ground leads into Braves Field tomorrow. As their first-game pitching choice, the Cleveland Indians are calling on Feller, the man whose fast ball whistles while it works.

It will be Feller vs Johnny Sain, with the Braves putting their best pitching arm forward in a duel of right-handers, and in baseball-nutty Boston tonight here is cocksureness the Braves will win.

Even Cleveland's thunderous victory over Boston's Red Sox in the play-off yesterday hasn't tempered the town's enthusiasm for its Braves. "They won't be hitting against the Red Sox pitching," is the high source of comfort for the Braves' man-on-the-street.

The roughest task in Boston today was getting a ticket or a hotel room for the series. Even the speculators ran short despite prices as high as $50 per single seat. Hotel men long ago threw up their arms in despair at the influx. A river boat with 188 staterooms was hired to bed down a segment of Cleveland's incoming fans.

With standees, Braves field will hold 35,000 fans and that is the number that will launch what will be the richest World Series in history after 80,000 crowd into the Cleveland stadium daily.

The two clubs will be meeting tomorrow as comparative World Series strangers. They've been away from the World Series money pot for a combined total of 62 years, the Braves absent since 1914, the Indians out of it since 1920.

For Feller, the paradox is that in the year when he finally gets into a world series after shattering strike-out records and pitching no-hitters in previous years, he has had the worst season of his career with the Indians by failing to win 20 games. He has absorbed 15 defeats.

They're pitching him tomorrow with slight misgivings, too. He's working with only two days' rest after being blasted out of the box by the Tigers on Sunday, though he worked only 2 2/3 innings. He isn't at his best, he has said in the past, with fewer than three days' rest. And his fastball of late has not been puzzling.

In contrast, the Braves are coming up to the opener with a nicely rested Johnny Sain, whose 24 wins dwarf Feller's record. With the National League pennant clinched two weeks ago, Manager Billy Southworth has had leisure to point his pitchers for the series—unlike Lou Boudreau's used-up staff.

If the Braves and their Boston fans are fearing one man on the Indians today, it is not Feller as much as it is the Indians' manager, Boudreau. His slugging exhibition in the play-off game with the Red Sox was too impressive to kiss off, and they'll work on him more carefully than against any other man in the Indians' line-up.

The Braves go into the series with nothing to match the power

Pick-the-Winners Lineup This Week

THE WASHINGTON POST'S 1948 Pick-The-Winners football contest is under way. It will be held weekly through November 20. Better get off to a good start by entering today.

The first thing for you to bear in mind is that this is a contest of skill. Do not expect your luck to make you a winner. This contest is designed to reward those who know their teams and are students of football. Follow the accounts of the teams, study the scores week by week. Then make your choices of the winners.

The winner of each weekly contest will receive two (2) tickets to the Army-Navy game in Philadelphia, November 27, and an all-expenses paid trip to the big game for two persons.

The person submitting the most accurate entry each week also will receive four (4) tickets to a major college or professional game in this area. This game will be selected by The Washington Post and announced well in advance of the game.

The contest each week will include 20 of the major college games in the Nation. Each contestant will select the winner (or tie) of each of these games.

A twenty-first (21st) game is listed on which the "Probable Score" will be given by each contestant.

Browns Beat Colts, 14-10, In Heavy Mud

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Baltimore, Oct. 5.—On a waterlogged gridiron ankle deep in mud, the Cleveland Browns plastered a 14-10 defeat on the Baltimore Colts here tonight.

To register their fifth straight All-America Conference victory, the Browns had to come from behind twice, rubbing out Colt advantages of 7-0 and 10-7. Edgar (Special Delivery) Jones scampered over for both Cleveland touchdowns while Lou (The Toe) Groza added both extra points.

The only moments of exaltation for the crowd of 32,000 came in the first period when Billy Hillenbrand raced 78 yards with a Y. A. Tittle pass for a touchdown and in the second period when Rex Grossman booted a miraculous 33-yard field goal.

After that Cleveland dominated the contest which was a grueling offensive battle despite the slow track.

Graham, Motle yStar

The Colts, Eastern Division leaders, were able to advance into Brown territory only once in the second half, and then only to the 44-yard line. The Browns, with Otto Graham pitching the wet ball with consummate skill, and 240-pound Fullback Marion Motley battering the middle of the Colt line, were constantly threatening to make a rout of the mud battle.

Seconds after the opening kickoff it was virtually impossible to recognize the players, so plastered with mud had they become. But in those opening seconds, a mud-caked swiftie, Billy Hillenbrand by name, gave the crowd its biggest thrill.

Hillenbrand gathered in a Y. A. Tittle screen pass on his own 22-yard line and sped 78 yards for a touchdown to bring the Colts a lead which was short-lived.

Five minutes later, Jones climaxed a 64-yard Brownie advance by sliding over from 6 yards out. Graham, who has now thrown touchdown passes in 13 consecutive games, touched off the drive when he collaborated with Halfback Tom James on a 54-yard pass which moved the Browns to the Colt 11. Three plays later Jones went over.

Graham, Motley Star

Their running attack hamstrung by the viciously charging Brown line which restricted the Baltimore ground game to 87 yards, the Colts took to the air in the second quarter. Tittle, whose seven completions in 17 tries moved the ball 146 yards, connected on three straight tosses to reach the Brown 33-yard line.

At this point Rex Grossman booted a line-drive field goal which split the upright as if radar-guided.

The Brownies payoff touchdown came late in the third quarter and stemmed from a 17-yard punt by Baltimore's Charlie O'Rourke.

Booting against the wind, O'Rourke sliced the ball and it rolled out of bounds on the Colt 26. A Graham-to-Mac Speedie aerial was good for 20 yards. Jones plunged over from the four after two tries and that was to be the end of the scoring.

Rainy and Windy Predicted For World Series Opener

Boston, Oct. 5 (AP).—Rainy, windy and cool weather for tomorrow's first game of the World Series was forcast tonight by the Weather Bureau.

A special series bulletin on weather prospects, issued at 4:15 p. m. (EST), said:

"Temperatures throughout Wednesday will remain in the lower or middle 50s and winds will be fresh to strong northeasterly 20 or 30 miles per hour.

"The present outlook for Thursday is for clearing skies and continued cool."

Baseball commissioner A. B. "Happy" Chandler is the man who must decide whether a game will be postponed in the event of bad weather.

Indians Still Favored

Boston, Oct. 5.——The Cleveland Indians tonight were 9-5 favorites to win the opening game of the World Series over the Boston Braves tomorrow, and 13-5 choices to win the series.

Lou Going Hollywood?

Hollywood, Oct. 5 (AP).—The movies offered Lou Boudreau a job today, in the best Hollywood tradition.

Universal-International said they'd like Boudreau for a new Bill Bendix picture ("The Life of Riley").

But to give it the customary Hollywood twist, the Cleveland Indians' manager, who plays a lot of baseball—ask the Red Sox—would be cast as a rabid fan, not a player. And a Brooklyn fan, at that.

Poor Ignatius!

Boston, Oct. 5 (U.P.).—They came from far and near today and some of them won't even get in the ball park.

Take Ignatius Humphreys of Kansas city, for example. He'll spend hte first two days in jail He was arrested after an automobile accident and charge with drunken driving after motoring from Kansas City for the game.

Tribe, Braves Take Workouts; Wind May Hamper Sluggers

Indians Get Look At Braves Field

By Gayle Talbot

Boston, Oct. 5 (AP).—Both Cleveland and Boston took brisk workouts today in final preparation for Wednesday's opening game of the World Series.

Few of the Indians had seen the home field of the Braves before today, and the Cleveland team's right-handed sluggers surveyed with open delight the friendly left-field fence.

It is only 337 feet to the left field wall down the foul line. The right-field fence is even closer, 319 feet away, and Bob Feller commented uneasily that "you could spit over it."

The center field wall is 390 feet from home plate. Why the Indians should be so happy about the measurements was a slight mystery—they're almost identical with Cleveland's Municipal Stadium playing field. The stadium has a longer center field, 410 feet, but both foul lines hit the wall just 320 feet from the batter's box.

Feller, after warming up briefly from the Braves' field mound, said that he was "as ready as I'll ever get."

Manager Lou Boudreau of the Indians, whose two home runs broke the Red Sox's backs in yesterday's play-off, did not work out today.

Boudreau said he would start Bob Lemon, 20-game winning righthander, in the second game. Gene Bearden, the slim lefty who throttled the Red Sox yesterday for his twentieth victory, will be rested and ready to face the Braves in the third game at Cleveland.

Feller Seems Like Giant on High Mound

By Whitney Martin

Boston, Oct. 5 (AP).—Bob Elliott, Boston Brave third baseman, watched the Cleveland Indians troop into their dressing room today to get read for their final workout before the opening World Series game tomorrow.

"Hey," he called, "don't you guys get too cocky. Those home runs you hit at Fenway Park yesterday are just outs here."

Standing out on the field you got his idea. The chill wind whipping in from the Charles River did a right turn as it reached Braves Field to sweep in over the leftfield fence and make baseballs hit in that direction turn and retreat like cowards.

Even the scoreboard seemed to shudder as the breeze clipped it broadside, and when that scoreboard shudders it is a major movement. It really is something, a mammoth affair with more dials and gadgets than an airplane cockpit. One visitor, seeing it the first time, gazed in awe, then blurted:

"What happens when they hit it? Does it light up like a pinball machine?" It does look like a perpendicular pinball machine, at that.

The mound at Braves Field looks like a foothill of the Alps. That is, it towers up above the abnormally flat infield, and Bob Feller standing out on it today and throwing a few balls just to get the feel of it looked like a colossus.

When he turns loose his fast one from that elevation it will be like a guy sniping at a traveler from behind a rock up in the mountains.

Cronin Admits Red Sox Shake-Up But Insists McCarthy Will be Back

Boston, Oct. 5 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox, according to General Manager Joe Cronin, are in the throes of a reorganization plan but it can be taken for granted that Marse Joe McCarthy will be back next season to complete his two-year managerial contract that is said to call for $40,000 per annum.

There are many who insist that Catcher Birdie Tebbetts, a native of nearby Nashua, N. H., will be McCarthy's successor as Bosox pilot. But it appears definite hat Tebbetts will be forced to mark time until McCarthy again decides to shuffle off to Buffalo. He did that suddenly while managing the New York Yankees in the midst of the 1946 season.

"I've lost before. That's nothing new to me," Joe emphasized yesterday after his Red Sockers were overwhelmed by the Cleveland Indians in the American League's first playoff game.

"It was just one of those things," he continued. "We went through the regular season on even terms with the Indians and finally wound up losing the odd game.

"My only regret is that my boys lost. They're a great gang."

Nats Send Sullivan, Ferrick To Browns for Sam Dente

Acquiring youth in exchange for age and cash, the Nats yesterday obtained Infielder Sammy Dente from the St. Louis Browns in return for Pitcher Tom Ferrick, Shortstop Johnny Sullivan and an undisclosed amount of money.

Dente, 25-year-old native of North Arlington, N. J., played in 99 games for the Brownies last year, his second in the majors. Filling in mostly at shortstop, the swarthy Italian-American batted .269.

He came to St. Louis from the Red Sox last winter in the deal which sent Pitcher Ellis Kinder and Infielder Billy Hitchcock to Boston. Dente batted .232 at Boston, and .311 for Louisville in 1946.

President Clark Griffith of the Nats was persuaded to make the deal for Dente by his son-in-law, Joe Cronin, general manager of the Red Sox, whose property Dente had formerly been. Cronin rated Dente highly.

Ferrick, 6-foot 3-inch, 210-pound righthander, is 33 years old. He has been the Nats' No. 1 relief pitcher for two years. He won only one game in 1947 and only two in 1948, but he saved many others for the Nat starters.

He appeared in 31 games in '47, and in 39 in '48. He came to the Nats from the Browns before the '47 season for the $10,000 waiver price. He previously pitched for the Athletics and Cleveland.

Sullivan, 28-year-old native of Chicago, came to the Nats in 1942 after only a year and a half in the minors. He was the regular shortstop in 1943 and '44. His best batting average was .256 in 1947. In '48, he hit .208 in 85 games.

King Midas Splashes to Victory Over Isa in Laurel Feature

Until Today

Rain Puts Off Completion of Pro-Am Golf

FEW OF THE golfers left in the dark in Monday's pro-am at Prince Georges showed much inclination to finish up their rounds yesterday and anyway the course was closed because of the rain.

So Al Houghton, the Prince Georges pro, will wait one more day before declaring George Diffenbaugh the winner and handing a little over $300 to Diffenbaugh for the day's work. Diffenbaugh shot a 68 to win the pro sweepstakes and, helped by three partners, took three more prizes in the pro-am, including a tie for first.

Edgie Johnston of Prince Georges will be the leading amateur prize winner with his 73-4—69. His score added to Wiffy Cox's 71 tied for first in the pro-am, gave him the low net prize and enabled him to place second in low gross.

There'll still be an opportunity to dispute that today, however. Anyone who couldn't finish on Monday will be allowed to do so, providing the course is in shape.

THE LADIES picked another gray day to open tournament play yesterday and had to put it off.

The CBS Cup Tournament will make its third try on Friday at Kenwood Country Club. The 54-hole Payne Cup event, a three-day affair which was supposed to start yesterday at Columbia Country Club, will begin today if possible. Both tournaments will use the original pairings and starting times.

3-Year-Old Returns $10 Before 7000

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Laurel, Md., Oct. 5.—A Nor'easter blew into Laurel today, but backers of the Baltimore-owned Bobanet Stable didn't blow a bet.

The golden touch was applied by an aptly named horse, King Midas. He got up in the last jump—or "dive" for the track resembled a canal—to win the featured Takoma Park, a test for 3-year-olds who aren't remembered for their Derby or Preakness doings.

Apprentice Benny Civetello rode King Midas and also carried the black and orange stripes to victory aboard Wee Hal in the fourth race. Bruce Livies' Bobanet crew also accounted for the first event when Apprentice Willie Gilbert went to the fore and stayed there with Tiger Fore.

Markup Feels Weight

Some 7000 hardy regulars were on hand for the day's action. A power failure outside of the plant silenced the bark of the announcer and hampered the mutuel department, but the show went on.

King Midas was facing five rivals in the Takoma and was kept well off the pace in the early stages while Brookfield Farm's Isa set the pace followed by Christiana Stables' Markup. In the final drive, Markup's 124-pound assignment told on him. Isa held on well but King Midas came to the outside and fairly flew in the final 70 yards to be up for the slim victory.

King Midas returned a $10 mutuel and was clocked in 1:14 3/5 for the 6 furlongs, creditable considering the sloppy, soggy going.

Civitello put up an effective but different ride on Wee Hal. He took this 3-year-old to the top early and just couldn't be caught although Mrs. W. T. Joyce's Hamull closed in on him at the end. Mrs. Jack Carson's Orange Sun was third in the field of 11.

Wee Hal returned $6.60 and stepped or swam the three quarters of a mile in 1:15 3/5.

Double Returns $81.20

Tiger Fore turned in another front-running effort in the first race. Gilbert hustled the gelding between horses to get into the lead. Chief chasers at the end were H. S. Horkheimer's Cuban Bill and N. Cohen's Baby Pauly.

Tiger Fore was a $10.80 shot and was clocked in 1:17 2/5 for the distance, which was another 6 furlongs.

Those who coupled Tiger Fore with Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Band Concert, the $6.60 winner of the second event, collected $81.20 in the daily double.

Lions Add 3, Suspend Four

The Washington hockey Lions yesterday announced the purchase of Harry Dick, 210-pound defenseman from the Boston Bruins.

Building for the coming season, the Lions also have signed a pair of promising 21?year old Canadians. They are Lou Crowlis, goal tender of Oshawa, and Gordon Duggan, winger of Halifax.

The Lions are on their way to Washington minus four of the members of last year's club. The Porteous twins, Frank and Dan, Joe Ciuman and Johnny Carr-Harris have been suspended for failing to report for the training games.

The Lions play their last exhibition game Friday against the Kitchener, Ontario, Seniors and report to Washington Saturday.

Horsemen Protest Dope Rule, Threaten Test Case in Court

Laurel, Md., Oct. 5 (AP).—Horsemen said today they will make a court test case of it the first time the Maryland Racing Commission hauls one of them up on its new regulations against doping.

A boycott which was being planned for today was called off.

John A. Manfuso, vice president of the Maryland division of the Horsemen's Benevolent and Protective Association, said owners and trainers will go along with the new rules for the time being.

The first time the commission takes action against a horseman, however, the HBPA will take it to court.

"We are positive that no court in America will rule that a man can be held responsible for a horse who is taken out of his care for two hours prior to racing," Manfuso said.

"We have notified the commission of our opinion and they are aware that we plan to take the first case to court."

The situation came about this way:

For two years, Maryland has had a "receiving barn." Horses entered in a race were taken there two hours before post time and guarded carefully until they stepped on the track. Each was given a saliva test for stimulants. If there were signs of doping, the horse was scratched. No action was taken against owner or trainer.

The commission changed these rules last month. It reported that urine and saliva tests after several races showed stimulation of horses who had passed the receiving barn examinations.

The new rules retain the controversial receiving barn. Winning horses will get the post-race urine and saliva tests. If there is a positive reaction, the purse will be reclaimed. The second time it involves a trainer he will be tagged with the responsibility and perhaps ruled off the tracks.

Black Gets Out Of Bed, Says It's Indians in Five

Cleveland, Oct. 5 (U.P.).—The Indians will win the World Series in five games in the opinion of Don Black, their ace relief hurler who got out of a hospital bed for the first time today since he was hospitalized September 13 with a brain hemorrhage.

Black, now on the road to recovery after a long battle with death, was st

Virginia Rules 28-Point Choice Over GW Saturday

Colonials Have Only Faint Hopes

By Herb Heft
Post Reporters

After their embarrassing 26-6 trouncing before the homefolks by V. M. I. last Saturday, George Washington's Colonials hit the road this weekend with faint hope of victory.

The Colonials journey to Charlottesville, where on Saturday they oppose the University of Virginia. The strong Cavaliers have already been installed as 28-point favorites.

With their defeat last week, the Colonials also took their physical lumps. No less than six G.W. players were kayoed during the first half, and Tackle Harvey Shipman bruised his arm so badly that he watched the second half in civilian clothes.

But Tackles Jim Feula and Duke Mathieson, Guard Jim Regan and Backs Al Dugoff and Jimmy Kline, the others who were knocked out, and Shipman are expected to play against Virginia.

Scholar Can Carry Ball

Before he left the game, Dugoff, the former Roosevelt High scholar, returned a V.M.I. kickoff 81 yards for a touchdown. Dugoff attends G.W. on a scholastic scholarship.

George Washington's chances against the Cavaliers hinge on the return to form of Andy Davis, who paced the Colonials in their defeat against Wake Forest and their victory over VPI. Andy netted zero in 16 running efforts against VMI and completed only four out of 14 passes.

However, he was a tartar on defense, backing up the crippled GW line by assisting in tackles on nine straight plays at one stage. He also intercepted two passes, one on the goal line.

Virginia was surprised in its opener when Miami (Ohio) University, last year's Sun Bowl champion, gained a 14-14 tie. Last week, the Cavaliers stomped on VPI, 28-0. GW beat VPI, 13-0.

The Cavaliers have a wealth of reserves, having used 35 players in each of their two games, and are especially strong in the backfield.

Papit Has 92 Average

Their leading passing threat is Quarterback Joe McCary, who has completed 16 out of 30 so far. Fullback Johnny Papit is the No. 1 ground gainer by land with 148 yards and a 9.2 average per try. The Cavaliers also have Grover Jones, their best gainer of last year with a 5.2 average.

Paper Says Tribe Party Features Flowing Champagne, Flying Fists

Boston, Oct. 5 (AP).—Cleveland officials laughed off a report originating here of friction in the Indian baseball organization.

The reports grew out of a victory party for the Cleveland ball players last night.

One Boston newspaper (American) said several players swapped blows with one casualty—Joe Tipton, a third-string catcher, who suffered a swollen lip.

A Cleveland spokesman said the party was "perhaps a little joyous—even boisterous—but that report about any fights is the bunk."

Champagne flowed at the party, given by Greenberg to the pennant winning Indians.

This is the way the American said fists began flying:

"When Tipton got out of hand and started popping off, First Sacker Eddie Robinson, resentful of the remarks, started after him. Joe Gordon tried to break it up unsuccessfully.

"Then Ken Keltner stepped in. When Tipton took a swing at him, Keltner let him have it."

Greenberg and Cleveland President Bill Veeck then ordered everyone but the ball players out of the room and told hotel officials they would accept no telephone calls.

Six Preps Form League

A second new scholastic athletic league was formed yesterday at a meeting of six schools at Devitt Prep.

The league, consisting of Devitt, Priory and Woodward of Washington, Stuyvesant of Warrenton, Va., Longwood of Olney, Md., and St. Mary's of Annapolis, will be known as the Tri-State Scholastic League.

Formation of the league followed by three days the organization of the Metropolitan Washington Catholic High School League, consisting of Gonzaga, St. John's, Georgetown Prep, DeMatha and St. Anthony's.

Like the Public High and Catholic High Leagues, the Tri-State loop will observe the 18-year-age eligibility rule. Enrollments of boys at the schools in the Tri-State League range from the 45 at Devitt and Stuyvesant to the 75 at Priory.

The league will begin operation in January with the basketball season, and continue through baseball season. In September, all the teams, except Priory, will compete in league football. Priory has no football team.

Frank Terry, athletic director at Devitt, yesterday was named chairman of the league. A permanent commissioner will be named later.

Feller, Sain Pitch Opener

of the Indians' Boudreau, Ken Keltner, Joe Gordon and Larry Doby and as usual the advantage in slugging seems to rest with the American League pennant bearers.

But Boston has faith in its Braves, directed by the cool, canny Southworth who is a veteran of four World Series and was not panicked in a year when he led his Cardinals to victory over the Yankees.

They don't know exactly how the Braves are going to win the series up here in Boston, but there's high confidence they'll win it somehow. After Sain will come Warren Spahn, No. 1 lefthander, and Sain will work three games, if necessary, but there are other guys around like Eddie Stanky who wins ball games for the Braves.

Stanky's back in the Braves' lineup tomorrow at second base despite a broken ankle that has barely healed. "You can't keep a guy like Stanky out of there when you're trying to win the big ones," says Southworth. And Braves' fans are in hearty agreement about the little fellow who doesn't know how to play losing baseball.

With Jeff Heath on the sidelines with his tragic ankle-break last week, the Braves have somewhat desperately called in Marv Rickert from Milwaukee for the outfield. They are playing him by special permission of the Indians, but he represents no Heath who hit 20 home runs during the season and dotes on right-handed pitching.

Dark Spells Off Boudreau

The Braves don't have the brawn of the Indians, but they think they have the National Leaguer's counterpart of Boudreau at shortstop in little Alvin Dark, the freshman who banged out a .322 average this season. And Stanky is hitting .315 . . . Tommy Holmes, a .325 man in the outfield, is their other .300 hitter.

Braves' field is built in both right and left for home runs off the bats of Boudreau, Keltner and Gordon, their right-handers, and Doby, Robinson and Mitchell, their southpaw swingers. The Indians bring a record of 130 homers this season, contrast to the Braves mere 95.

Chisox to Oust Les O'Connor, Paper Reports

Chicago, Oct. 5 (AP).—The Herald-American said today that the Chicago White Sox will announce tomorrow the ouster of Leslie O'Connor as the club's general manager and his replacement by Frank Lane, president of the American Association.

Charles Comiskey, 22-year-old White Sox secretary, said "I don't know a thing about it. Any announcement of that nature will be released by our office and not by printed rumors."

The Herald-American story also said that young Comiskey, grandson of Charles (Old Roman) Comiskey, would be named club president, succeeding his mother, Mrs. Grace Comiskey.

Lane, the story said, will resign the American Association presidency he has held for two years.

The White Sox appointed Jack Onslow, 59, former major league catcher, as team manager, last Sunday, succeeding Ted Lyons, a member of the White Sox as either a player or manager since 1923.

O'Connor, named general-manager on December 15, 1945, was former assistant to late Commissioner K. M. Landis. He replaced Harry Grabiner, now a Cleveland Indian executive, as front office boss of the White Sox.

There was previous speculation that O'Connor would follow Lyons out of the Pale Hose organization which finished the 1948 American League race in the cellar.

Reached at his Boston hotel, O'Connor while sitting with Onslow was asked by newsmen if he was going to remain with the White Sox.

"I prefer not to discuss that at this time," he replied.

It's W & M's Turn to Try To Stop Thomason Saturday

Richmond, Va., Oct. 5 (AP).—Rube McCray of William and Mary and Bob McNeish of Virginia Tech were running neck and neck today for the title of uneasiest coach in the Old Dominion.

McCray, whose highlytouted Indians were pushed rudely off their pedestal Saturday by Wake Forest, had to figure out a suitable defense against the sensational attack of the Braves' next opponent—air-minded V. M. I.

McNeish, whose Gobblers haven't scored in either of their two outings to date, had to find some way for the Techmen to push across a few touchdowns against Maryland Saturday.

Finding a way to stop the V. M. I. assault meant, to McCray, just one thing—finding a way to stop Bobby Thomason. A bottled-up Thomason would be the ruination of the Keydets. His bullet tosses have accounted directly for three of V. M. I.'s eight touchdowns to date, and have set up the other five. Thomason's record shows 27 completions in 43 attempts for 321 yards.

Finding an offense for Virginia Tech was a problem McNeish hadn't figured on facing. With Bruce Fisher, Ray Beasley and Ralph Beard in the backfield, Tech apparently was all set for a big year. But the Gobblers didn't score two weeks ago when they were downed by George Washington, a rank underdog, so McNeish went to work, drilling his men long hours on passing and running.

What happened? last Saturday? The Gobblers gained 120 yards in all against Virginia and didn't cross the goalfield stripe but four times.

Over at V. M. I. Coach Slick Morton was doing a bit of worrying of his own. Morton was pleased with the Keydets' showing against George Washington over the week-end—especially pleased with the showing of Thomason—but he figured his team would need a little more defensive adequacy if it's to stop a William and Mary squad on the rebound.

So yesterday, Morton put his charges through a practice session devoted principally to a study of Indian plays and how to stop them.

Washington and Lee, jubiliant over their victory over Ohio, prepped for Georgia Tech in a light workout without pads. Line Coach John Jaffurs, who scouted Tech last week, told the Generals that the Yellow Jackets have "the smartest team on both offense and defense that I've seen in a long time."

Trainer Doc Boyd reported the general squad in top shape.

N. Y. Civil Service Employes Lauded By Governor Dewey

GOP Presidential Nominee Thomas E. Dewey yesterday made his first statement during the campaign on Civil Service. In it, he lauded the Civil Service employes of his State as "incomparable."

His letter to the Civil Service Employes Association was read by President Frank L. Tolman at its annual meeting yesterday in Albany. It said in part:

"New York is fortunate in having an incomparable Civil Service group. In war and in peace they have continually shown a steadfast devotion to duty and responsibility as public servants and, above all, a genuine interest in their work.

"Their efficiency, as well as their good faith, is on the highest level. With all these qualities they have been of invaluable help to my colleagues in the administration and to me in our effort to give the people a government with both a head and a heart.

"For our part we have done our utmost to show appreciation of the people for the high standards maintained by their public servants . . . I am happy to say that everything this administration has done for the employes of the State has been fully requited by increased efficiency and increased attention to the public interest.

"The Civil Service employes, for their part, will have the accomplishments of the last five years as the best possible guarantee that their interests will have most sympathetic consideration possible as long as this administration is in office."

Here again, Dewey took the "lofty" approach. He refused to use the occasion to get into a you're-a-liar scrap with the Democratic National Committee which accused him of threatening to abolish Civil Service a few days ago. He left that to others. Since Dewey now has made his views clear on Civil Service if he becomes President, he's expected to remain silent on the subject for the remainder of his campaign.

PEOPLE: PHILIP E. NELSON is the new director of Agriculture's important dairy branch. He's a former Wisconsin State Senator and he recently was in Commerce's small business office . . . Bruce Catton will be leaving the Commerce Department soon where he is special assistant to the Secretary. His interesting new book, The War Lords of Washington, will be released next week. . . JENKIN W. JONES, the rice expert of Agriculture's Bureau of Plant Industry, recently took his first sick leave in 36 years of Federal service.

NOTES: The Veterans Administration has given its finance section employes a detailed memo on their rights and restrictions on annual and sick leave. Some VA supervisors have been on the arbitrary side in granting leave . . . The newest group of military police won't permit civilian employes to get out of their cars at the Pentagon entrances. It's okay for the brass to unload there, however . . . Donald Nelson, the wartime Federal official, is now trying to sell oranges and other California fruits to his former Government colleagues . . . CIO's left-wing United Public Workers will get another kick in the pants from Uncle Sam very shortly.

PRINTING: The Joint Congressional Committee on Printing has asked Federal agencies to justify the use of their many substitute printing plants. And it will get a quick answer which will be something like this—that the substitute plants are far quicker and cheaper than GPO . . . REVENUE: The annual fall dance of the Internal Revenue Athletic Association will be held tomorrow night at the Shoreham . . .

U. N.: The General Assembly of the U. N., now meeting in Paris, can be expected to take two actions which will affect U. N. employes in this country. They are: (1) to set up a system of internal taxes on the salaries of U. N. employes, and (2) to increase present salaries from 10 to 40 per cent—an increase which would offset the proposed taxation plan.

American employes in U. N. are now given the money by the international agency to pay their Federal income taxes. Our Government has refused to exempt their salaries from taxation. Under the internal tax plan, the U. N would take a sum of money from each employe at the end of each year. It's all most complicated but it's being done in order to equalize the take-home pay of all employes.

CIVIL SERVICE: The Administration was accused yesterday of "extreme partisanship" by Chairman Ed Rees of the House Civil Service Committee for its failure to appoint a GOP member to the Civil Service Commission.

Rees hinted the appointment is being delayed because the Administration wants to white-wash the Federal worker loyalty program. The Commission is supposed to have representatives of both parties on it at all times.

The Administration invited the Rees attack—and there will be others—by its dilly-dallying on the GOP appointment. Arthur S. Flemming has been off the Commission for five weeks and the Administration knew he would resign for five months. It has no excuse for leaving the job open this long during a political year.

Decision on Montgomery Charter Vote Ready Soon

Opposing Groups Finish Arguments In Appeals Court On Referendum

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 5.—Opposing sides in the battle over legality of the proposed Montgomery County charter rested their cases today before the Maryland Court of Appeals.

A decision is expected sometime this week.

The court ruling will determine whether a referendum on the charter will be conducted in the county November 2.

A highlight of the hearing today was an observation by Judge Charles Markell in commenting on action of the Montgomery Circuit Court in ordering a clause of the charter deleted.

Deletion Question Raised

"Deletion is the duty of a censor, not a court," he said. "I can't find any excuse for this republication (of the charter) and deletion."

The appeals court was asked by Hubert A. Schneider, Bethesda attorney, to rule the proposed charter unconstitutional, and issue an injunction against the scheduled charter referendum.

"I can't imagine a more fruitful source of litigation," Schneider said in arguing that the charter, as it now stands, is illegal. It should be submitted to the voters, he declared, in its entirety or not at all.

Pointing out that the Maryland constitution requires charter councils to sit not more than one month a year to enact legislation, Schneider said a charter stipulation that the annual budget shall be adopted in June is illegal. Budget adoption is a legislative function, he declared, and must take place in May.

Argument Attacked

This argument was countered by Frederic P. Lee, representing the charter board and charter committee. Lee said the one-month limitation on legislation applies only to legislative powers now exercised by the Maryland General Assembly.

The budget is currently adopted by the county commissioners, not the Legislature, he pointed out.

A third lawyer to argue today was H. Warren Buckler, jr., representing the Montgomery County Commissioners and the Maryland Park and Planning Commission, both of whom, he said are "completely impartial."

Both agencies believe the charter document is "unworkable in its present form," he added.

At one point in the hearing, Chief Judge Ogle Marbury expressed the view that "the whole purpose of the home rule amendment to the constitution was to transfer the right to pass local laws from the Legislature to counties with a charter form of government."

"Some Monstrosity"

Seconding the observation, Lee said he did not believe "the people of Maryland (in adopting the constitutional amendment) set up some monstrosity to make home rule unworkable." Nor did the General Assembly, in proposing the constitutional amendment, intend an unworkable law, he added.

Earli -, Buckler had commented that he "strongly suspected the General Assembly in 1915 imposed the one-month limitation on enactment of legislation to discourage counties from adopting a charter form of government."

In concluding his argument, Schneider told the court that at prese ' in Montgomery County, "there is no confusion, no emergency and no chaos and we have a functioning government."

He said the court should ban the November 2 charter referendum "so the voters can go to the polls free from the shadow of this illegality I've charged."

Lawyers pointed out the court could sustain or reverse the lower court order allowing the original charter or the amended one to be voted on; or it could prevent the balloting. The later step would mean ruling the charter unconstitutional, it was pointed out.

Four pedestrians were injured, one fatally, in traffic accidents on rain-swept Washington streets yesterday.

A 34-year-old drugstore clerk, Miss Mary Barbieri, 4400 Jennifer st. nw., was pronounced dead on arrival at Suburban Hospital after she was struck by a Capital Transit bus at about 6:30 p. m.

Police said the bus driver, William H. Wendling, 24, of 1738 G st. nw., was turning left from Fessenden st. into Wisconsin ave., on a green light. The woman, whose umbrella apparently obscured her vision, was crossing the street also on the green light and ran into the right side of the bus, it was reported.

Wendling was charged with failing to yield right of way to a pedestrian and was held for the coroner, according to police.

A 5-year-old boy, Roger Titus, jr., 1616 17th pl. se., suffered possible fractures of the skull and left shoulder when he was struck by an automobile as he ran across Minnesota ave. se., west of 16th st., at 3:30 p. m.

Driver of the car, identified as Robert L. Werth, 33, a real estate broker, of 3142 Monroe st. ne., rushed the boy to a private physician and then to Providence Hospital, where he was admitted.

Struck Crossing Street

The third pedestrian injured was Hyman Prager, 51, of 1354 Monroe st. nw. Police said he was hit by a car turning off Park rd. into 14th st. nw. as he was attempting to cross 14th st. He was taken to Garfield Hospital, where the extent of his injuries and his condition were undetermined. Operator of the car was identified by police as Geneva Allen, 33, of 2100 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Andrew Grant Chapman, 69, of 812 6th st. nw., was admitted to Gallinger Hospital for undetermined injuries after he was struck by a streetcar as he crossed Connecticut ave. near LeRoy pl. nw. at 7:20 p. m. Police identified the streetcar operator as Harold W. Lunsford, 24, of 1320 F st ne.

In Virginia, two persons were injured, neither critically, in a three-car collision shortly after noon on the Mount Vernon parkway.

Hospitalized at Alexandria Hospital are Dr. Joseph L. DeLevay, 45, of Summit, Va., who suffered a lacerated forehead and possible internal injuries, and his wife, Mrs. Adeline DeLevay, 49, who suffered severe lacerations of the face and forehead. Three DeLevay children, who also were riding in the car, escaped injury.

Park police said the accident occurred just north of Slaters lane, near the National Airport. According to their account, an automobile operated by Robert R. Lee, 22, of 5840 MacArthur blvd., traveling south, collided with two northbound cars. One was the DeLevay car, the other was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Ray Bridges of Route 1, Alexandria, and their 4-year-old daughter, Lorraine. The Bridges family escaped injury. A reckless driving charge has been placed against Lee.

By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

Girls' Training School Holds Open House

The National Training School for Girls, 5201 Loughboro rd. nw., will hold its second public open house at 3 p.m. today. The public is invited.

The program will include a talk by Director of Public Welfare John W. Tramburg and an inspection of the institution's facilities, Mrs. Rose C. Smith, superintendent announced yesterday. After the inspection, tea will be served in the domestic science room.

Gusts Reach 55 Miles; Do Little Harm

Rain borne by winds which reached gusts as high as 55 miles an hour swept Greater Washington yesterday and last night and half of nearby Alexandria and Arlington was blacked out by a power failure during the storm.

R. L. Ware, district superintendent of the Virginia Electric Power Co., said two major power lines were cut by automatic equipment. The affected lines were at the Army Arlington substation at S. 18th st., near US 1 in Arlington.

Three emergency crews were sent out to restore service when the power blackout at 5:30 p. m. Service was restored by 6:22 p. m.

Wind reached gale force here yesterday. The Weather Bureau Station at National Airport recorded one gust of 55 miles an hour and a minute-long sustained velocity of 48 miles an hour.

However, damage from the wind was relatively light in Greater Washington. Washington police received several reports of tree limbs blown to the ground.

There was some small damage done by the high wind at Colonial Beach, Va., to boathouses there.

Rainfall during the day measured about an inch and a half. Extremes were a high of 53 at 12:36 a. m. and a low of 46 at 9:40 p. m.

The Weather Bureau said the combination of high wind and rain was responsible for the tides running two to three feet above normal in the Potomac River. The Bureau said there was no flood danger.

The weatherman forecast for today a gray day, predicting considerable cloudiness, not so windy and a high temperature of about 60.

Navy to Occupy Park Barracks Until Next June

The Department of the Interior will allow Navy to retain use of two temporary barracks on the West Potomac Park polo field until June 30, 1949, Interior officials said yesterday.

The department, whose National Park Service has been trying for more than a year to reclaim the site, had originally asked Navy to vacate the barracks by October 1, in order that a project to raise the land level could be carried out.

Assistant Secretary of Interior William E. Warne, said a petition by the Navy indicating that the barracks were essential in carrying out the national defense program, was responsible for the department's decision to extend the date of eviction.

5 Saved When Craft Is Sunk In Big Seas Off Baltimore

Baltimore, Oct. 5 (Spl.).—Seven men were reported missing today after a 69-foot tug capsized and sank during a gale in Chesapeake Bay.

Five others aboard the tug Arundel, owned by the Arundel Corp. of Baltimore, were rescued.

Coast Guard and Arundel Corp vessels were searching the scene for other survivors but were hampered by high winds and heavy seas.

In the hope that some of the missing reached shore on life rafts or with life preservers, searching parties were patroling the beaches near the place where the tug went down.

12 Aboard Capsized Craft

The Arundel Corp., a dredging concern, said the tug was carrying a crew of nine and three other men when it capsized at about 1:50 p. m. near the entrance to Baltimore harbor. The three non-crew members aboard were an inspector of the U. S. Engineers, a junior engineer of the Arundel Corp., and a messman who had been picked up from the dredge Maryland, also owned by the Arundel Corp.

Two of those rescued were picked up by a lifeboat from the Coast Guard Cutter Violet. Three others were pulled from the water by the crew of another tug boat.

They were identified by the Coast Guard and Arundel Corporation as: John W. Holt, Ricardo O. Sanchez, Bartolo C. Colon, Frank Zalowski and Samuel Bailey, all of Baltimore. Bailey is an inspector for the Army Engineers.

Missing Identified

The Arundel Corporation identified the missing as Arne Carlson of Brooklyn, N. Y., and the following Baltimoreans, Edward W. Lehton, John E. Tarbutton, James E. Hoffman, Carlos T. Carrillo, Claude Bowers and Joseph G. Kuhn. Tarbutton was said to be the captain of the Arundel.

Highest Tides in Years Piled Up at Norfolk

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 5 (AP).—Northeast winds up to 30 miles per hour in the Norfolk area today brought the highest tides in 12 years, damaged the Virginia Beach seawall, and sent Coast Guardsmen to the aid of two vessels in Chesapeake Bay.

The weather bureau reported tides at Norfolk, which flooded some low sections of the city, were 3 feet above normal. The tide this morning was 6.8 feet above mean low water, compared to 8.9 feet recorded September 18, 1936, during a hurricane.

Man, Wife Escape Death In Wreck of Cruiser

A couple en route from Annapolis (Md.) to Palm Beach, Fla., narrowly escaped death yesterday when their storm-battered craft was smashed to pieces against a jetty at North Beach Park, Md.

William J. Kountz of Pittsburgh and his wife spent more than five terror-filled hours in the main ship channel of Chesapeake Bay below Annapolis in a 32-foot cabin cruiser, without running lights, radio contact or power, until they were blown ashore.

The cruiser lodged first against rocks and later hit the jetty. In complete darkness and heavy rain squalls the couple clambered over the jetty to land as the boat broke up.

Kountz and his wife arrived in Washington last night to buy new clothes aand equipment before continuing their journey to Palm Beach by automobile.

3-Alarm Fire Damages N. E. Yeast Plant

Fire broke out early last night in the main building of the Fleischmann Yeast Plant, manufacturers of compressed yeast and vinegar, 24th and Douglas sts. ne.

A third-floor dining room, used by the office and supervising force, was gutted. Offices on the second floor were flooded with several inches of water. The finished product of compressed yeast on the first floor was saturated, but no estimate of its value was given. No one was injured.

The blaze was discovered shortly before 6 p. m. by Manager L. S. Lee, who smelled smoke as he was walking along the second floor. Between 30 and 40 employes, working on the night shift, were warned and left the building safely as soon as the first alarm was turned in by Lee.

Two additional alarms followed in rapid succession after firemen arrived at the scene. Officials said they were afraid the plant contained inflammable alcohol. Lee said, however, that the plant uses low wine, a reduced alcohol which is not inflammable.

The fire apparently originated in the kitchen adjoining the dining room, when a motor unit in a small electric ice box became overheated and ignited the wooden frame partition immediately behind it, according to Fire Marshal Raymond C. Roberts, who, with Chief Clement Murphy, was on the scene.

The plant, which covers 8 acres, employes about 170 persons.

About 25 pieces of fire apparatus responded and police scout cars came from five precincts to halt traffic in the vicinity. Fire hoses had to be laid almost a quarter of a mile to Bladensburg rd.

$4,263,543 Asked for 7 Road Projects

The District Department of Highways has submitted a request for $4,263,543 with which to carry out seven major construction projects including the long-planned reconstruction of Military rd. nw. through Rock Creek Park.

The program has been sent by Director of Highways J. N. Robertson to the Public Roads Administration for approval under the Federal Highway Authorization Act which provides funds on a $1 for $1 matching basis. The District would spent one-half of the $4,263,543 total if the proposals are approved.

Military Road Project

The Military rd. project calls for a four-lane highway separated by a center strip running from 13th st. to 27th st. nw. and a new bridge over Rock Creek, according to L. M. Hedgcock, deputy engineer of streets.

The proposed highway will follow a direct course, eliminating the present winding, narrow two-lane "inadequate" road carrying District fringe traffic into the downtown area, Hedgcock said. The present underpass at 16th st. will be used, but will be rebuilt and widened to fit into the new traffic pattern.

The department's requests are expected to be acted on in the next two weeks and actual construction on the Military rd. project is planned for the fall of 1949 if approval is granted. The funds are for use during the fiscal years of 1950 and 1951.

The Highways Department asked for $1,438,083 for work on primary roads; $860,908 for secondary roads, and $1,964,552 for urban roads.

The primary projects include reconstruction of the Military rd. underpass at 16th st., $460,750; paving of approaches to the South Capital st. bridge from Canal st. to M st. and on the north ramp between O and P sts., $140,000; extending and relocating of roadways on the Anacostia side of the South Capital st. crossing, $130,000; landscaping in the area, $30,000.

Also, paving of District approaches to the East Highway Bridge, $163,000; purchase of rights of way and paving of Virginia approaches to the bridge, $396,800; landscaping in both areas, $87,454.

Secondary projects include erection of an underpass at Kansas ave. ne., under the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad lines and the construction of a new bridge on Military rd. across Rock Creek. Both will total $860,908, and the breakdown will depend on individual costs after bids are received, Hedgcock said.

Trade Board Seeks Boost In U. S. Aid To District

Spokesman Suggests Congress Contribute Percentage of Costs; Sales Tax Predicted

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

A new Washington Board of Trade campaign is under way, aimed at getting more Federal dollars to shore up the tottering District municipal budget.

What amounted to a keynote speech in the campaign was given yesterday by Col. William L. Press, board executive secretary, during the forty-first annual conference of the National Tax Association meeting in Denver, Colo.

Board officials here explained that Press' speech, giving historical highlights in Federal-District fiscal relations, is to be printed as a document for use in a drive to increase the Federal payment. This drive would be coupled with pressure for congressional approval of a District deficit-erasing sales tax.

Further emphasis on the drive for a higher Federal payment is coming today in the Washington Board of Trade News. An editorial calling for a District sales tax gives this as the Board of Trade solution for the District's current fiscal problem:

"First pass the sales tax. . . . Secondly, make provision for an adequate Federal payment which will fairly compensate the District for expenses incident to the Government establishment's municipal costs. All District organizations and citizens should get behind this program. They should lay plans now to sell it to the new Congress. The penalty of failure will be painful."

12 Per Cent Contribution

The Federal payment to the District is now a flat 12 million dollars a year, out of a total budget close to 100 million. One million of the present payment goes to the water fund, and the rest into general funds.

Colonel Press recalled the time when the Federal Government paid one half of the annual expenses of the District government. He recounted recent moves at the Capitol for restoring the Federal-District financial relationship to a system in which the Federal Government by formula would pay a uniform percentage of District operating costs, in place of the present lump sum.

He foresaw new hope that such a percentage formula might be approved. Said Colonel Press:

"The general congressional attitude that District residents are bearing their fair share of costs is demonstrated by a growing willingness to increase the Federal payment.

He said the District fiscal formulas proposed in recent sessions of Congress "are indications that the congressional mind is gradually concluding that the National Capital requires more money and that it is time for the United States to pay its fair share."

Colonel Press pointed out that the District boundaries are fixed. He pointed to a continuing exodus beyond the District line of business establishments and of individuals most able to pay taxes. He said:

"Assuming that the period of greatly expanding tax resources in the District has ended and that residents are now bearing a fair share of the District costs, it is clear that attention now will be primarily devoted to increasing the Federal payment to meet the needs of developing and maintaining the Capital of this great Nation."

He said it was unlikely that Congress would agree to a formula that suggests taxation of Federal property in the District. He recommended as being easy to administer, equitable and reasonable, a formula that would make the Federal Government share the costs of the District government in proportion to the percentage of Federal land in the District.

At one point Colonel Press flatly predicted enactment of a District sales tax early next year.

Year 5709 Services End In Temples

Rosh Hashonah services, celebrating the new year 5709 in the Hebrew calendar, ended at sundown yesterday in orthodox and conservative synagogues and temples.

The holiday which began Sunday at sundown opened a 10-day period of penitence which will be climaxed with Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement, on October 12. That day, most sacred in the Jewish year, will be marked by the devout with fasting and worship.

The Jewish calendar computes time from the creation of the world, 3761 years before the beginning of the Christian era. This makes the current year the 5709th. In a story published yesterday, The Washington Post said the year was 5079. The Washington Post regrets the error.

Marine Stabs Married Woman To Death, Kills Self in Grill

MRS. CLAUDIA JASKOWIAK
Slain in cafe

Pfc. CLAUDE S. JORDAN
Killed woman and self

A 23-year-old marine's hopeless love for a married woman brought sudden death to both yesterday when he drove a butcher knife into her heart and then sent the blade four times into his abdomen.

The double tragedy took place about 2:15 a. m. in the rear booth of the Star Grill, 1104 8th st. se., as a dozen horrified patrons looked on.

Pronounced dead on the scene were Mrs. Claudia Jean Jaskowiak, 31, of 428 8th st. se., estranged wife of an airman stationed at Bolling Field, and Marine Pfc. Claude Samuel Jordan, who was on emergency leave here from Camp Lejeune, N. C. Until recently, he was stationed here.

According to police, Jordan, a veteran of Iwo Jima warfare, had been sullen and uncommunicative during the evening. Suddenly he whipped a butcher knife out of his hip pocket, turned to the married woman seated beside him on the inside of the booth, and cried:

"Jean, I warned you it would come to this!"

With that, he plunged the knife into her left breast. As he arose, Mrs. Jaskowiak stumbled out of the booth, backed a few feet to the rear with her eyes on him, and then collapsed.

As she fell, the marine drove the knife twice into his abdomen, was struck several times over the head by a shore patrolman who had entered and fell into a booth, his body sprawled across the table with one leg on the bench. At that point, witnesses told police, he stabbed himself twice again, lying there the while.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued certificates of murder and suicide yesterday afternoon.

Love Letters Found

Police reported they found ardent love letters in the murdered woman's pocketbook from Jordan, which indicated he wanted to marry her.

Mrs. Jaskowiak, however, had "told him a lot of times she wouldn't marry him," according to Mrs. Gertrude Fowler, who rooms where Mrs. Jaskowiak lived and knew both of them. They had been going together "for some time," she said.

Mrs. Fowler said the couple had visited her room Monday afternoon and were in good spirits. "They were cuttin' up," she said. "He acted like he was very much in love with her," she added.

Mrs. Jaskowiak, who had been separated from her husband, T/Sergt. Walter A. Jaskowiak, a radioman at Bolling Field, since June, and Jordan arrived at the Star Grill about 9 p. m. Monday, police said.

About midnight, Mrs. Jaskowiak went to another booth and asked Miss Patricia Spence, 18, of 705 8th st. se., and Marine Pfc. Alfred Hernandez, 20, of the Marine Barracks, 8th and I sts. se., to join them. Miss Spence told police she had met the couple two weeks ago.

Says He 'Appeared Dazed'

From then until the tragedy, Miss Spence told police, Jordan "appeared dazed," and didn't offer any conversation.

"He acted as if he had something on his mind," she said.

Several times, Miss Spence added, the marine left the booth and went outside the restaurant. After one trip, she said, there was a "bulge" on his hip. About 1 a. m., Jordan got up again and entered the cafe kitchen.

There, police reported, he borrowed $1 from the cook, August Penamon, 613 6th st. ne. Penamon, who said he had known the marine about a year, told polce the marine asked him to write a letter to his parents.

"I want to give you my mother and father's address," Jordan said. "I want you to write to them for me." When the cook asked what he should write, Jordan replied: "I'll tell you later." Then he returned to the booth and killed the woman and himself.

Two Pronounced Dead

The two were pronounced dead at 2:36 a. m. by Dr. Richard Speaker, of Gallinger Hospital.

According to police, the Jaskowiaks were married in March 1942, in Texas, later were divorced, then remarried and afterwards separated.

Police reported Sergeant Jaskowiak told them the main factor in their separation in June was her relationship with the marine. They said the airman told them the wife had sought a reconciliation but that he did not want it.

Jordan served with the Fifth Marine Division on Iwo Jima and later in the occupation of Kyushu, Japan. Honorably discharged in August 1946, he had reenlisted for a second tour of duty in November 1947, and was assigned to the Marine Barracks here until recently. He was a native of Harriman, Tenn.

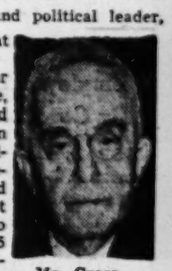
Wilbur Cross, Former Conn. Governor, Dies

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 5 (AP).—Former Gov. Wilbur L. Cross, who combined distinguished careers as an educator and political leader, died today at his home.



Mr. Cross

"Too old" for further service, he already had retired as dean of Yale's graduate school before he led Connecticut Democrats to victory after 15 years of unbroken Republican rule. He served four consecutive terms as Governor.

Inquest Clears Brothers Who Killed Stabber

A coroner's jury yesterday exonerated two brothers in the death of a 58-year-old man, who was fatally injured when he was thrown through a door into the street early last Saturday.

At a second inquest, the jury also exonerated a streetcar operator in the traffic death of a 76-year-old House of Representatives doorman, killed instantly when struck by a streetcar last Saturday night.

The brothers were Grafton Lyles, 36, of 1526 Bells ct. nw., and Winfield Lyles, 44, of 1528 Bells ct. nw., both accused of throwing Lewis W. Edwards, of 1531 Wisconsin ave. nw., into the street after he stabbed them during an altercation at Grafton Lyles home. Edwards' head struck a manhole cover. He died the next morning at Gallinger Hospital. The jury returned a verdict of justifiable homicide.

Exonerated in the traffic death of Edward S. Walls, 223 Pennsylvania ave. nw., was Leon D. Richeson, 27, of 2123 I st. nw. Walls was killed at 12th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw. The jury termed his death accidental.

Man Who's Been Around, Knows Much About Life, Is Emotionally Involved With a Friend's Wife, Who Is Cruelly Abused but Won't Leave Husband

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Eight years ago I met Jennie, the wife of a man I've known nearly all my life, and I thought her one of the most charming women I'd ever met; and I have really been around and know a great deal about life.

Jennie and Hank had been married about two years then, and in the years since they've parted numerous times, Jennie always going back against her will, she says.

Hank has no affection or understanding for her; he is cruel, strikes her in front of their children and bosses her around like a dog. His disposition keeps them from having any true friends and there is hardly a day that he doesn't make her cry. Her future with him is very dark and she has taken as much abuse as a woman can stand; I've seen some of it with my own eyes.

Earlier this year she started telephoning me and against my better judgment we started having secret dates. I told her I didn't want an affair because I thought too much of her, but after a few dates I broke down and now I am madly in love with her and she claims to love me equally, but when I urge her to leave Hank and marry me, she argues against it.

Wife Says Husband Is Helpless Fellow

SHE CITES two objections: 1. She is afraid Hank wouldn't have the courage to go on living if she left him; he's so hopeless, she says. 2. She figures I might get tired of being tied down and start going out with other girls again.

When I tell her all this is nonsense, that she must be in love with Hank still, she says she never was and never will be. As for my reliability, women always meant a lot to me in the past, but I was never in love before, nor did I ever mistreat a girl and Jennie is my only interest now. I know I could give her and the children financial security and a happy home life, that they don't have now.

I've come to the conclusion that she does love Hank but wants to have both of us, as she finds many good traits in me that he will never possess. If she wasn't in love with him, why would she stay with him, ruining her life and her children's also? What do you think? Please advise. F. B.

Another Pen-Sketch of Neurotic Affinity

DEAR F. B.: In previous writings I have touched on Dr. Edmund Bergler's book, "Divorce Won't Help" (Harper & Brothers, publishers), which vividly pictures in many pithy anecdotes the irresistible magnetism which certain types of neurotics have for each other.

And here in the case of Hank and Jennie is another illustration to add to Dr. Bergler's pen sketches of such people, who tend to cling tenaciously to their (unconsciously) chosen tormentors; and who, if forcibly expelled from the wretched relationship they revile, can't rest, figuratively speaking, until they get back into it, or into a comparably harassing situation.

It could be true, as Jennie says, that she never has loved Hank and never will; but as you sagaciously sense, she has a yen for him nevertheless; and it may be that his cruel, contemptuous treatment of her has something to do with it.

Man's Sympathies Are Wasted Here

THEIRS may be a sadist-masochist affinity, in which case the victim unconsciously seeks the role of being kicked around; and in bleating for sympathy and parading martyrdom to the world is carrying sell-out of dignity to further extremes, without positive desire to establish a peaceful orderly pattern of relationship to considerate associates.

In my opinion you are a pretty shrewd fellow, an astute analyst of women's meanings and motives when your head is cool, despite the fact that you've been conniving with Jennie to make somewhat a fool of yourself recently. I think you've hit the nail on the head in surmising that she likes to keep you on leash as an antidote to domestic tedium, but is much too involved with Hank, emotionally, to wish to leave him. So you're wasting time in trying to win her from the ugly set-up in which you encountered her. M. H.

Helpful Housekeeping Hints

Varnish may be applied to a fiber rug to renew its gloss.

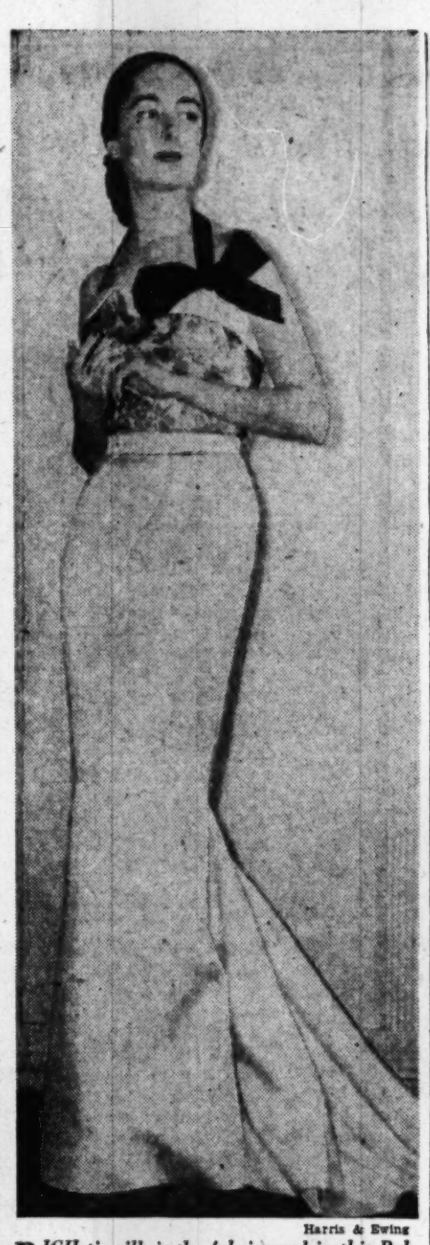
Shellac will turn white with the absorption of water or moisture.

Pipes exposed to low temperature should be insulated against freezing.

Pieces cut from an old felt hat or slippers and glued to the bottom of tables legs and chests will help prevent destructive marks on kitchen linoleum.

A kitchen sink should not be less than 35 inches above the floor, fitting tightly at the back against the wall, as a crack there forms a refuge for the too-friendly water bug.

From Paris —by Mail



Harris & Ewing

RICH tie silk is the fabric used in this Balmain design which also follows slim lines. Skirt flares into small train, is caught with tailored belt at waistline. Fragile black lace covered the white bodice which is cuffed and held with black velvet halter and bow.

PIERRE BALMAIN, noted Parisian designer, likes the long, slender silhouette for American women. In the nine originals he showed yesterday at Julius Garfinckel & Co., was this handsome dinner gown of pearl toned crepe banded with darker satin. Artistry is in the hemline which springs out suddenly from hidden panels of accordion pleats.

By Peggy Preston

HEAR, HEAR, Mr. American Enterprise—you've some new competition in Washington. Pierre Balmain, the French designer, has gone into the mail order business.

That's what he told us yesterday at a press showing of his nine designs at Julius Garfinckel & Co. This is how his plan works. You look at the gowns, make your choice. Your measurements are taken, sent off posthaste to his Paris shop. There your copy is made and within the month your dress arrives at your home.

It will be an "airborne" operation, made possible only by the speed with which transatlantic mail and cargo can now be carried back and forth. There is something very New World about the idea. It makes exclusive Paris originals available to more American women. No longer do you need to go abroad in order to own one. All you need now is the money for the actual gown. And Mr. Balmain has matched his prices to those of the top-plight American couturiers.

Mr. Balmain is currently making his third visit to Washington. He arrived in New York about six weeks ago and has been making a lecture tour of American colleges and universities. Yesterday he spoke to students of Marjorie Webster Junior College, elaborating on a favorite theme of his—that elegance in woman is attained through the proper development of her own personality and style.

He cited the "elegance" of his great friend the late Gertrude Stein, who was certainly no fashion plate in the ordinary sense. "Yet, because of her tremendous personality and intelligence, she was able to lend the most commonplace hat or dress, an air of real distinction," he reflected.

The designer first met Miss Stein in the dress salon of his mother at Aix-les-Bains in Savoy. His proudest possessions are two mementos which were gifts from her—a beautifully patterned Balinese scarf and a whalebone walking stick.

MR. BALMAIN is a Frenchman of considerable charm—and size. He looks like a former football player who has reached middle age and is still in "fightin'" trim. In fact he had to do considerable fighting in order to become a dress designer. His mother, who is still an important factor in his life, was violently approved to the idea.

From the time he was a lad of 7, he was interested in drawing and design. When he was 16 Mme. Prement, a couturier of his mother's day, saw his dress sketches and sent them to an important Paris fashion house. "That was the last we ever heard of them."

After graduating from college with a bachelor of science, Balmain was sent off to Paris to specialize in architecture. On the side he designed clothes and had three of his sketches accepted by Robert Piguet.

He then got a job with Molyneux and later with Lelong, finally launching his own business in 1945. His mother, relenting at last, agreed to be cooperative. She even opened a dress salon of her own in Savoy—allowing her son to stock it with his own designs.

Fat or Svelte—Food Choice Determines

By Ida Jean Kain

Ninety-five per cent of overweights choose to be fat. What's that again? Well, they choose fattening foods and fat is the inevitable result. Not one fat person in 10,000 can blame excess pounds on anything except eating too much of the wrong food.

When the choice is assorted carbohydrates and succulent fats, the calories are on the heavy side of avoirdupois. But if the food selection is from nonfat sources of protein and a variety of low starch vegetables and fruits, the calories are on the svelte side—so is the figure.

Everybody knows of course that some foods contain fewer calories than others, and are therefore less "fattening." But they don't know that some calories are actually less fattening. On the surface that seems paradoxical, since calories are calories . . . but there is a scientific explanation. Protein foods act not merely as fuel, but directly stimulate the metabolism. Or, in other words, protein provides high-powered calories that speed up the metabolism to burn fuel faster.

But let's put this in terms of food. An average slice of bread furnishes 75 calories. An egg furnishes 75 calories. But the bread calories are more fattening than the egg calories. Bread is classed as a starch, and for the benefit of the chap who wrote that he couldn't tell a carbohydrate from a calorie, let me explain that both starches and sugars are called carbohydrates, and 1 ounce of carbohydrate, any kind, furnishes 113 calories, any place anywhere. Also, 1 ounce of protein furnishes 113 calories, exactly the same as the carbohydrate. But protein calories are peppier and stimulate the body to burn more fuel. Let's go further.

When you eat the slice of bread, at 75 calories, you burn approximately 80 calories, or 6 per cent more than the total calories consumed. It takes these extra to cover the cost of digestion. But when you eat 75 calories of protein—lean meat, fish, eggs, fowl, cheese—you actually burn from 98 to 105 calories, or an additional 30 to 40 per cent.

Report From Prague

Quip From Golden Gate Shines on Local Scene; Fair Features Book Week

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

QUIPSTER BOB KENNY, who has been quiescent far too long, has once again raised his voice from the Golden Gate's wilderness. Bob, California's former attorney general, this last year tarried briefly, then dissolved from the Wallace cohorts. Not so long ago he was kidding former OPA head Paul Porter and his legal-light partner Thurman Arnold about the ADA (Americans for Democratic Action), that volatile political organization captained by Leon Henderson, which created such ferment at the late lamented Democratic Convention. Though ADA leaders were conspicuous, followers were decidedly nebulous. "Never" parodied Master Kenny "were so few led by so many!"

Report From Czech Capital

FROM PRAGUE to new ambassadorial post in Ottawa, the Laurence Steinhardts were in town for a short span. Saddest among sad stories of behind-the-Iron-Curtain Czechoslovakia was that of long-time President Edouard Benes' funeral. Ambassador Steinhardt, as doyen of Prague's Diplomatic Corps, led the cortege of his confreres, walking almost directly behind the coffin as he had done at Foreign Minister Jan Masaryk's obsequies. The funeral march wound 5 miles through the Czech capital, part of the route over cobbled streets.

Petite Mme. Benes, on the arm of her brother-in-law, walked the whole way. She wore high-heeled shoes, fragile black stockings and a crepe veil which hung to hem length—looked very much the great lady.

The funeral march started in late afternoon, ended after dark in front of Prague's great political prison—the prison in which many of Benes' close friends and coworkers are still imprisoned. The gaol's entrance was illuminated by two gas flares set in high cement pylons. The clear-enough implication that but for death Benes himself should have been incarcerated in the same grim pile was further heightened by a nicely thought out macabre touch. Inside the jail a large reception room was reserved for the diplomats and other outside-the-Iron-Curtain officials. After the long march they were seated on hard wooden benches and "refreshed" with drinks and sandwiches.

As the Communist functionaries served the collation most of those present were thinking of Drtina, a cabinet Minister under Benes, who jumped out the window just as did Jan Masaryk but was unfortunate enough to survive. Once sufficiently recovered to leave the hospital the former cabinet Minister was jailed and since has been kept strictly incommunicado.

Hundreds of thousands of weeping Czechs viewed the procession and circulating among them were not only the regular, now Communist-controlled police force, but also hundreds of young Communists, girls and boys, distinguished (if this word can be used) by red armbands and all slinging rifles. The actual burial was the following day at the Benes' country place, some two hours' drive from Prague. At the burial services, which were extremely simple in comparison to the elaborate funeral, the new Communist Premier arrived 14 minutes late, kept the whole foreign Diplomatic Corps waiting. After the shortest of orations, he rushed away.

Mme. Benes is still at her country place—but not alone—she's hemmed in by ranks of red guards, placed there for her "protection." Meanwhile, almost all of Benes' old cabinet members have escaped and several of the top numbers are here in Washington.

Book Week Excitement

WE'VE SCARCELY recovered from the anticipated excitement of Cranberry Week when along comes another special week—this time it's Book Week which lasts from October 25 through 29.

Right here in the Capital one of the most interesting activities is the Cleveland Park Congregational Church Book Fair, an annual event which starts Monday evening, October 25, at 7 to 9, and stays open daytimes thereafter. Each year the C.P.C.C. has some special theme—and this time it's Indians—our own brand.

The Smithsonian Institute's Dr. Judd has written a phamplet, on sale for 50 cents, all about the Indians in the Washington district and the museum has lent all sorts of interesting redskin relics.

Each day authors of differing variety will speak. Among them will be Washington's Mrs. Minard Hamilton who as Elizabeth Hamilton has tossed off a number of kid's best-sellers including "Go West Young Bear"—and reports that bears rather than bunnies are favored by this day's younger generation. Any profits from the church's book sale go to buy equipment for the John Eaton School Library which soon will be built in the neighborhood.

Korean Envoy Entertains

The Special Representative from Korea, Dr. Pyung-Ok Chough, entertained last evening at an informal dinner for 70 guests. The party was held at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Among the guests were members of Ambassador Chough's entourage from Korea—Dr. W. P. Kim, economic adviser, Dr. Y. J. Chung, legal adviser and Joon Koo Kim, Dr. Chough's secretary.

Other guests were the Ambassador of China, Wellington Koo; the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Charles F. Saltzman, former Ambassador of China, Dr. Alfred Sze and Mme. Sze, Gen. and Mrs. John H. Hilldring, Gen. and Mrs. William H. Arnold, Gen. and Mrs. E. S. Bres and Dr. Paul Douglass, president of American University.

Also, Mr. and Mrs. Phillips Clark, Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Hummel, Capt. George H. Maines, Mr. and Mrs. John Allison and Dr. and Mrs. Frederick Brown Harris.

Dr. Chough is special representative of the Republic of Korea with personal rank of Ambassador, and on Monday he presented his credentials to President Truman. The Ambassador is leaving soon for Paris to join a group of Koreans who are there in the event the United Nations invites them to discuss the Korean problem now on the agenda.

MRS. ANNA MARIE MEWHORTER of Arlington is admiring a colonial vase exhibited at the Alexandria Antique Show, sponsored by the John Alexander Chapter, DAR, in the town's Armory. The benefit show will continue through Friday

Alexandria's Antique Show Features Historic Exhibits

The four-day Alexandria Antique Show opened yesterday in the City Armory, 210 S. Royal st., as more than 500 people braved a chilly rain to look over the displays of historic furniture, rugs, china, and what-nots.

Sponsored by Alexandria's John Alexander Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, the display featured 24 separate booths put up by 21 individual antique dealers.

Proceeds from the show will be turned over to the DAR chapter's special projects funds, including money for scholarships, for the Alexandria Police Boys Club and to restore Alexandria's historic Ramsay House.

The antiques display will continue today, Thursday and Friday from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m. All antiques are for sale.

To open the exhibit yesterday, Representative Howard Worth Smith (D., Va.) cut the ribbon marking the armory entrance at 1 p. m., then spoke briefly wishing the DAR success in its show.

Greeting visitors was Mrs. Robert W. Wheat, 3d, the chapter regent, who then introduced the show manager, Mrs. Mimi Alexander Doughty, and the general chairman, Mrs. Robert V. H. Duncan.

One center of interest for the show's visitors was an antique Swiss music box, made about 1850, and featuring bells, a tiny automatic organ as well as the customary music box tinkle.

The antique shop, which displayed the box, described it as a sort of "nineteenth century juke box." It played 10 tunes, ranging from "Home Sweet Home" to "Annie Laurie."

Another interesting exhibit was a rug dating from the Napoleonic era, and woven with an Egyptian motif commemorating Napoleon's invasion of that country.

Among the rare furniture in the Armory exhibit are six Hepplewhite chairs, made about 1785, which once were loaned to the Philadelphia Museum. The set is priced at $3000.

Silver Anniversary

Miss Wright Honored for Hearing Aid

A gracious gray-haired lady received approximately 400 well-wishers at a reception yesterday honoring her silver anniversary with the American Hearing Society. Miss Betty C. Wright, who lost her hearing when she was 21 years old, was surrounded by flowers and congratulatory letters, cards and telegrams. The reception was held at the national headquarters of the Hearing Society.

An accident, after Miss Wright completed college, caused her deafness. While learning to read lips in the hospital, she decided to dedicate her life to aid persons similarly handicapped.

By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post
MISS BETTY C. WRIGHT
. . . silver anniversary

In Philadelphia, she studied methods of aiding the hard of hearing and later put her knowledge to use with World War I veterans. She joined the American Hearing Society in 1923 and worked with them until World War II, when she took a leave of absence to become a professional consultant in three Army hospitals.

Today, Miss Wright is the director of Field Service in the national headquarters of the society.

About Plans for 'House Warming'

We have recently purchased a new home and would like to have our "housewarming" an "open-house" affair, due to the fact that I want, not only my close friends, but acquaintances, working partners and former neighbors who have expressed a desire to see it, to be asked. Since this would be a sizable crowd, about 40 persons, I am wondering if open house would be in good taste? How would I word the invitation? What hours, on Sunday preferably, would be the best and what refreshments would I be expected to serve?
P. D. G.

Yes, an open house would be an excellent way to entertain your large circle of friends and acquaintances. Write the invitations on small cards or folded informals which have your name printed or engraved on the front. You could write informal notes for the invitation or you could say:

At Home or Open House
(choose one)
4 to 6 P. M.
Sunday, October 10
Edgar and Elizabeth Snow
Your Address

The late afternoon and early evening hours are usually considered best for such a gathering because it allows your guests to make other plans for either afternoon or evening. You could specify the hours from 4 to 6, 5 to 7 or 4 to 7, for instance.

The usual refreshments at such a party is a beverage such as coffee or tea or both, tea cakes, dainty sandwiches, mints and nuts. These refreshments can be arranged on your dining room table which has been made pretty with a dainty cloth, flowers and candles. If you are serving both coffee and tea, invite two friends to pour, one beverage at each end of the table. The other foods are arranged on large serving plates for the guests to help themselves from the table. It makes the party move more smoothly if you will ask another friend to replenish plates and the coffee and tea pots. This will leave you free to greet your guests in the living rooms.

I have a rayon shantung dress dark green, and would like instructions on laundering it. Or, would it be wiser to have it dry cleaned?
T. J. B.

Because washing will remove the body from some rayon materials, I would suggest you have the dress dry cleaned.

I have painted my floors with black paint. I've been using a dry mop on them, but feel they should be cleaned. What can I use to clean them without removing the gloss?
S. W.

I would suggest you wash the floors using a mild soap and lukewarm water. When washed clean and rinsed, polish dry with a soft cloth to bring up the gloss. Also, applying a coat of wax to the newly washed floors will increase the gloss and keep them clean longer.

Is there any way to keep light blue silk or rayon from fading? Late in the summer I purchased a lovely light blue print dress and hate to see it fade before I get a chance to wear it again next spring.
E. K.

Place the clean dress in a box with a tight-fitting lid or a garment bag which light will not penetrate. Since silver fish eat rayons, sprinkle the dress with fresh pyrethrum or other silverfish preventive powder before storing it away.

Your Baby and Mine

Noise-Making Toys Help Child Get Over Fear of Loud Sounds

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Here is a mother who admits that she was on the way to being the type of disciplinarian who would insist that her child ate whatever she wanted him to, whether he liked it or not.

"Your articles," writes Mrs. R. E. H., "plus the advice of my doctor, who confirmed them, changed my mind before I had done the child any lasting harm. My 10-months-old baby now eats everything offered to him, voluntarily, after four months of deciding whether he wanted to or not.

"My problem is his fear of loud noises. Any woman's sudden laughter; the squeals of his baby cousin; the talking of a roomful of people, will cause a storm. So far, I haven't been able to convince him that noise won't hurt him.

"I feel it would be cruel to subject him to such noises, in order that he should get over his fear. My husband and I are rather low-voiced, though I sing a great deal at my work. If I made increasingly louder sounds would it help? We enjoy attending baseball games to which he could be taken if it weren't for this fear.

"Also, how much freedom can be given babies of 7½ months and 10 months when they play together?"

Children tend to develop a greater taste discrimination and come to enjoy different flavors. No use forcing unwanted food on them if they are ever to enjoy it.

All babies are born with a fear of loud sounds, though this fear may stay with some babies longer than others. Keenness of hearing might be a factor.

Coupled with this fear of loud sounds, there is also the temporary fear of strange persons which crops up at about 9 to 12 months. It is possible that these two fears have now united and it is baby's timidity toward strangers, as much as his fear of loud noises, which now sends him into a "storm."

Spare him loud sounds until he gets over this. But give him some noise-making toys with which to entertain himself. A horn, a loud rattle, a small bell, will help him to see that he can manufacture the sound and that it is harmless.

I wouldn't put two babies of such tender ages in a pen together. They might mawl each other in the belief that the other was some new kind of active toy. Keep close watch over them if you do.

'Feeding Small Fry' Will Be Subject Of Food Classes

"Feeding Your Small Fry" is the title of a new Red Cross nutrition course of the what, how and why of child feeding, which will open on Tuesday, October 12, at Walsh House, 2020 Massachusetts ave.

In six lessons, the daytime classes to be held from 1 to 3 p. m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays, will provide instruction to mothers on the feeding of the normal child, from infancy to the kindergarten.

The course was originated by Mrs. Frances Chapin, assistant director of the District Red Cross nutrition service. Mrs. Chapin, who will teach the course, has not only raised five children but is now a grandmother, and has made a special study of child feeding. She says the instruction will provide young mothers with the know-how to carry out the instructions of the family doctor where special diets are required as well as to do an all-round job of feeding the normal, healthy child.

The six classes will be titled "Good Nutrition for You and Yours," "Some Feeding Facts That Grandma Didn't Know," "Your Baby's First Foods," "Foods in Your Baby's First Year," "Feeding Your Run-Abouts," and "Discipline for Mom and Dad." The last lesson, "Discipline for Mom and Dad," deals with child psychology as related to feeding.

The child-feeding classes will be limited to 25; those desiring to take the course should telephone the Red Cross nutrition service, Hobart 6800, regarding registration.

Readers Pick Favorite Comic Strips

Our private poll on comic strips conclusively proves that it's still a free country, and you're entitled to your own opinion.

John W. Hardell, jr., of 1418 Somerset pl. nw. thinks Napoleon is absolutely tops, with Dotty, Penny, Myrtle and Donald Duck close behind. In fact, he has a good word for practically all of our strips.

R. J. Hancock of 3607 Tilden st., Brentwood, Md., agrees only on Penny, and adds for his top selections Palooka, Terry, Barnaby and Mickey Finn. Poor Winnie Winkle is "a very poor last."

Anne T. Flynn of Purcellville, Va., says Penny and Barnaby are positively "dopey," but Mary Worth is the champ of them all.

A. V. Allen of 1209 Lamont st. nw. agrees that Mary Worth gets first place, and says that Myrtle, Penny, Dotty and Mickey Finn follow in that order.

Marguerite Conway disagrees. "Mary Worth is a soap opera in print—but at least the drawings are good. My favorites are Penny, Barnaby, Myrtle and D. Duck. And don't forget Webster's cartoons, and Grin and Bear It."

Mrs. Laura J. Jackson of 2817 North 23rd st., Arlington, Va., divides her selections into two categories. For humor, it's Myrtle, Penny, Barnaby and Dotty. For plot: Mary Worth, Terry, Steve Canyon, Palooka and Dixie Dugan.

Connie McElhinney of Four Winds, Alexandria, Va., chooses those two resourceful young lads, T. Lee and S. Canyon.

Mildred Mugridge likes Terry, but says we can leave Canyon out of the paper as far as she's concerned. And "Penny is just a female heel."

Fifteen-year-old David Wigransky of 1409 Manchester lane nw., likes all the comics, so long as they're well done, and cautions that we musn't sneer at "plot" strips just because they're not really "comic." As Dave puts it:

"They're something more than funnies. They're well illustrated, superbly written stories—not moronic trash. Rather than 'comics' they should be called 'illustories'."

Mrs. William J. Chosch of 9 Russell rd., Alexandria, Va., wraps it all up in these well-chosen lines:

Oh, the funnies aren't funny any more.
They're not the way they were in days of yore.
Now instead of hearty chuckles
We all chew our nails or knuckles
And the villain acts in ways that we deplore.

Oh, the funnies aren't funny any more.
But it's certain that to read them is no chore.
For it multiplies our pleasure
When the hero finds the treasure
And the bad guy gets his Sunday britches tore.

TIED-WAD

A friend of mine was talking about his recently deceased grandfather, who left his heirs a tidy fortune.

"He was very careful with his money," the grandson recalled. "He always tied up his wallet in yards of string."

"What for?" I asked, innocently.

"He said he saved a lot of money that way. When he was tempted to buy something, he'd have to unwind all that string. By the time he was finished he'd usually managed to curb the urge to buy."

Dear Bill:

Can't something be done about the raised "islands" which dot so many of our streets?

They have caused many accidents and near-accidents. One friend of mine recently drove into one with a marker sign on it, and did $63 worth of damage to his car.

If we must have them, c they be made more visible?

Dear J. W.:

NEW YORK—Federal Judge Rivkind was driving along the West Side Highway when a cop stopped him. Rivkind's companion, over the Judge's protest, suggested that since the traffic offense was a minor one and inadvertent, perhaps the cop would overlook it—especially since the driver was a Federal Judge . . . "Oh, yeah? That's a new one," said the cop. "Let's see some proof" . . . Rivkind had no identification other than his driver's license. "I'll find out if you're a judge or not," said the cop. Then he asked him a series of questions about Federal matters—who appoints United States Commissioners; before whom are prisoners arraigned, etc.—questions he had studied in his examination for sergeant. Judge Rivkind answered them all incorrectly. "Wrong, wrong," said the cop. "That PROVES you're a judge. Drive on . . ."

RKO paid all the expenses of Jane Greer to come East for the Tie convention which voted her Miss Valentie. RKO supplied Miss Greer with a long speech—which she tossed aside in favor of 10 words—"Here's to more ties in the world—and closer ones."

Trainer Jimmy Jones has told friends that Citation will surely start in the Pimlico Special on October 29, and that this will be the horse's last race of the year. Ex-war correspondent Sid Ferber, incidentally, will be the commentator on the 38 daily telecasts from Pimlico and Laurel . . . At the premiere of "Hamlet," many repeated the much-quoted line: "Television makes everyone look like Jed Harris." Mr. Harris, who looks as if he needs a shave, although he shaves daily, sighed: "If I go on television, who will I look like?"

David Tebet went to Boston last week to see the new musical, "Love Life." His wife, Nanette Fabray, is starred in the show. He hadn't seen her in weeks. When he arrived at the theater he met Elia Kazan, the show's director, who greeted him: "Hello, Dave. How are you?" . . . "Well, I have a little sinus trouble, and a cold," said Tebet. . . . "Is that so?" was the typically Theater reply of the director. "Keep away from Nanette."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Rep. Thomas Irked by Trooper

By Drew Pearson

Congressman J. Parnell Thomas of New Jersey, chairman of the Un-American Activities Committee, is a most suspicious person. Not only has he investigated all sorts of alleged Communists, but he also sought to investigate a policeman who arrested him.

Thomas

Thomas is not, however, at all happy over the current FBI investigation of himself and the kickbacks he received from four women who returned all or part of their Government salaries to him. Nor does the Congressman relish the investigation of the way in which he kept two soldiers out of combat and then later collected several hundred dollars from their families.

The policeman Thomas wanted investigated was Maryland State Trooper Kaplow, who arrested the Congressman near Port Deposit, Md., some time ago, for violating a 50-mile speed limit and passing other cars on a curve.

Complaining about the incident in a letter to W. Lee Elgin, Maryland Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, Representative Thomas wrote:

"I signaled to the trooper to stop and then told him who I was."

The trooper phoned headquarters for instructions, and was told that since Congress was not in session, Thomas had no congressional immunity. The Congressman was then taken before Magistrate J. Howard Pugh at Port Deposit, where despite his plea that he was in a hurry to keep important engagements in Washington, he was fined $17.50.

An Un-American Motorist?

Apparently, Thomas' behavior was such that State Trooper Kaplow was suspicious. He didn't really think the Congressman was an un-American Communist, but he did think he might be un-American in jeopardizing the safety of other vehicles. So Trooper Kaplow decided to keep a friendly eye on the gentleman from New Jersey.

The Congressman's own description of the matter is much more graphic than anything that could be written by a columnist. So we will quote from his own indignant letter to Commissioner Elgin.

After going about 2 miles, Thomas said, "I noticed that Trooper Kaplow was following me. At the time I was driving about 30 miles per hour. We were traveling on a road where there were signs showing the speed limit was 50 miles per hour. I lowered my speed, Kaplow lowered his. Then I raised my speed to see what he would do, and he still followed me."

The chairman of the Un-American Activities Committee has tapped the telephones of a great many people. He has employed a young army of investigators to shadow suspects and dig through their past. But he became highly indignant when the Maryland State trooper trailed behind his automobile. In fact, he became so indignant that he stopped and demanded that Kaplow stop following him.

"To which Kaplow replied," as Thomas later reported to the Maryland commissioner of vehicles, "that he was going to follow me. And for 10 miles Kaplow trailed my car. As far as I could find out, he did it for just one reason, and that was to annoy me."

Un-American Cop?

All of this touched off the Congressman's suspicions. A suspicious soul anyway, Thomas decided that there was something dire and foreboding in the action of this policeman. Probably he was un-American. So he asked the Maryland commissioner for an official investigation.

"I appeal to you for an investigation of this case," he wrote Elgin. "I do not want any favors. I am perfectly willing to take my medicine along with everyone else, but I am convinced that there were aspects to the case that were not only unduly annoying, but which lead to suspicion."

The Congressman was so suspicious that he also got the support of his then colleague, Congressman Dudley Roe of Maryland, who wrote Commissioner Elgin that Thomas was "a very outstanding member of Congress and a warm personal friend of mine."

"He has been driving a car for 30 years," continued Roe, "and has never had a summons before. Public officials greatly regret having any summons appear on their record, and anything you can do in this matter to straighten out the incident for Congressman Thomas will be sincerely appreciated by me."

The Maryland authorities, however, weren't worried about Trooper Kaplow's possible un-Americanism. They did absolutely nothing.

Meanwhile, Representative Thomas was so suspicious, so irate, and so indignant that he even asked A. W. Magee, New Jersey Motor Vehicle Commissioner, to investigate.

Embarrassed, Magee gave him the brush-off.

"I am sure," he wrote back, "that the Maryland authorities will thoroughly investigate. I know you will appreciate that it will be difficult for the department to do anything inasmuch as it happened in another State."

Thus ended another chaper in the palpitating life of J. Parnell Thomas of New Jersey.
